ARNOLD CHARGES GIGANTIC FRAME-UP TO CONVICT FRANK; HOOPER SAYS CONLEY'S STORY STOOD TEST OF GRILLING

Not Looking for Blood, But Seeking the Murderer of Mary Phagan, Says Hooper

FRANK DESCRIBED AS JEKYL AND HYDE BY STATE ATTORNEY

Frank A. Hooper, in Opening Speech for the Prosecution, Declares That Frank Must Have Killed Mary Phagan or Sat Nearby and Permitted a Negro to Attack Her

He Declares Conditions at Factory Were a Terrible Temptation "to a Man With Little Conscience and a Great Lust"–Scores Defense for Not Cross-Examining State's Character Witnesses

IN an eloquent speech, replete with word pictures, sometimes sarcastic, sometimes pathetic, sometimes humorous, but at all times, dramatic, Attorney Frank A. Hooper, Thursday morning opened the state's argument for the conviction of Leo. M. Frank for the murder of Mary Phagan.

Mr. Hooper began his speech by declaring to the jury that the state was not seeking a verdict of guilty unless the defendant was guilty, and that the state cheerfully assumed the burden of proving him guilty. "This man," said he pointing to Frank, should not be convicted because the law is seeking a victim. We are not looking for blood. We are simply seeking to find and punish the murderer of little Mary Phagan."

Mr. Hooper scored the conditions existing at the pencil factory, called attention to the fact that after many witnesses had sworn that Frank's character was bad the defense had failed to interrogate them as to why they held to such opinions.

He described the defendant as a Dr. Jekyl and Mr. Hyde—a man who was congenial with two widely different sets of associates. Mr. Hooper declared that Jim Conley had stood like Stone Mountain in the face of the terrific bombardment directed at him by Attorney Rosser in an effort to break him down.

That effort failed, said the speaker, because Conley had, after telling many lies, eventually arrived at the truth. Perhaps the most dramatic portion of Mr. Hooper's speech was when he said: "Give the defendant the benefit of every doubt, the circumstances show that he either killed this little girl, or sat there in his office and let the negro kill her and drag her body down the hall to the elevator and take it down to the basement. This murder took place in the metal room and it occurred while Monteen Stover was in Frank's office."

Mr. Hooper reminded the jury that although Frank had sworn that he did not leave his office between 12 and 1 o'clock the Stover girl had gone there during that period and found the office empty.

"I don't believe Frank had murder in his heart when he followed Mary Phagan back into the metal room," said Mr. Hooper, "but he had in his heart the fruitful passions stored up for this little girl. He was killing her when Monteen Stover came to the office."

Mr. Hooper touched upon the evidence only in a general way. He left the detailed summing up to solicitor Dorsey who will make the last argument.

At 11:15 o'clock Mr. Hooper concluded his argument, having spoken for two hours and ten minutes. For the next thirty-five minutes he examined the points upon which the state would request the court to charge the jury, giving especially emphasis to what constitutes "reasonable doubt."

At 9:05 o'clock Thursday morning the court convened and immediately afterward the argument started. Attorney Frank Hooper opening for the state.

The lawyers had brought to court with them numerous law books, for reference and attation during the course of their speeches.

Deputy Sheriff Plennie Minor addressed the audience and admonished it to preserve absolute order. The deputy instructed the audience that whether the attorneys strove at wit or not, it must not laugh.

The rule regarding the witnesses having been raised, many of those whose testimony had gone into the records were present in court to hear the arguments.

HOOPER OPENS FOR STATE.

Attorney Hooper stepped to the front of the jury box and facing the jurors began his argument.

Mr. Hooper began speaking slowly and in a natural tone

OPENED ARGUMENT FOR RESPECTIVE SIDES

Attorney Frank A. Hooper on left and Attorney Reuben R. Arnold on right. Mr. Hooper for the state made the opening speech in the Frank trial. He spoke two hours and fifteen minutes. Mr. Arnold, for the defense, had spoken but forty minutes when court recessed. He is expected to speak during the greater part of the afternoon session.

Religious Prejudice Back of Frank's Prosecution, Declares Reuben Arnold

NOT ENOUGH FACTS TO WARRANT TRIAL, ASSERTS ATTORNEY

So Declares Reuben R. Arnold in His Opening Remarks to the Jury–He Tells Jury That the Noise of a Few Sapheads in the Street Doesn't Make Public Opinion

Mr. Arnold Scores Third-Degree Evidence, Quoting From Recent Decision by Court of Appeals and Declaring It Applies to Frank Case – His Speech Interrupted by Recess

WHEN court adjourned for lunch Thursday, Attorney Reuben R. Arnold, for the defense, had just finished laying the foundation for his speech to the jury.

A wonderfully persuasive and convincing speaker, Mr. Arnold was perhaps never more effective during his whole brilliant career than in these opening remarks.

He spoke deliberately, choosing his words, pausing for emphasis, and the gestures of a master actor could not have been more dramatic.

His tall form enabling him to see and be seen from every corner of the courtroom, the peculiar resonant quality of his voice rising high above all other sounds, he caught and held the attention of spectators and jury alike with the magic of his eloquence.

He started by picturing the jury as set above and apart from the public, sequestered, guarded, reading no papers and hearing nothing if the public discussion of the trial. In order that they may impartially weigh the evidence and make up their verdict without bias or prejudice.

Then, turning to address the courtroom rather than the jury, Attorney Arnold excoriated the "long-tongued, loud-talking sap-heads who immediately conclude that a man is guilty the moment the finger of suspicion is directed towards him."

Using George Kendley, the street car conductor, as an example, he denounced those who would punish the defendant "for no other reason than that he is a Jew." He declared that if Frank had not been a Jew he never would have been prosecuted.

He paid his respects to the jury by saying they are "way above" the average. "I'm not saying this to flatter you," said he. "I reckon I have tried cases before a thousand juries, and I'm telling you the simple truth."

Using a recent decision of the court of appeals with deadly effect, Attorney

SPEER CHARGES TO BE CONSIDERED BY GEORGIA'S SOLONS

With Impeachment Threatening Georgia Judge, His State Congressmen Confer in Regard to Probable Action

GEORGIAN TO TAKE FIRST IMPEACHMENT STEPS

Final Action by Delegation Will Be Deferred Owing to Illness of Congressmen Bartlett and Edwards

BY RALPH SMITH.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Aug. 21.—The next important step in the case of United States Judge Emory Speer, of the south Georgia district, whose impeachment is threatened by congress, will be a conference of the Georgia congressional delegation to determine upon a course of action with reference to the charges that have been preferred against the jurist. This conference will be held probably tomorrow morning, unless the illness of Congressman Bartlett and the absence from the city of Congressman Edwards prevents.

Judge Bartlett is confined to his apartments with a severe cold, and Mr. Edwards is in Georgia at the bedside of a very sick brother. In view of the special interest these congressmen feel in the case by reason of the fact that their districts are under the jurisdiction of Speer, it is possible that final action by the delegation will be deferred until it is possible for them to be present.

Chairman Henry D. Clayton, of the judiciary committee, which has the papers in the Speer case, this morning conferred with a Georgia member about the matter. He agreed that any Georgia congressman or committe from the delegation, should be given free access to all of the papers so that the delegation may act intelligently in reaching a decision as to its final course. The initial step looking to the impeachment of Judge Speer will come from a Georgia congressman, if it is determined that the charges warrant such actions.

While all of the members of the delegation will approach the case with an open mind, it is believed, from what is known of the charges, that a member of the delegation will be selected to make the formal motion in the house for the impeachment of the Georgia jurist. This motion will be accompanied by a resolution directing the judiciary committee to proceed with its investigation and report to the house, whether in its opinion the charges justify an impeachment trial before the United States senate.

The investigation before the judiciary committee will be open to the public as was the course in the Archbold im-

SPEER DEMANDS HEARING BEFORE JUDICIARY BODY

BY RALPH SMITH.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 21.—Judge Speer today wired to Congressman Hughes, of the Third district, demanding that he be given a hearing before the judiciary committee on the charges that have been filed by the department of justice. The message came from Mount Airy. Judge Speer will be given an opportunity to be heard, if a motion to impeach is made and prevails in the house.

FIGHT FOR THAW'S FREEDOM POSTPONED TO NEXT WEDNESDAY

Writ of Habeas Corpus Applied for by Thaw's Lawyers Will Be Tried in Canadian Court at That Time

(By Associated Press.)

SHERBROOKE, Quebec, Aug. 21.—Harry K. Thaw, Matteawan fugitive, will be arraigned in the superior court here on a writ of habeas corpus at 10 o'clock Wednesday morning next. His counsel agreed to this this morning.

Lawyers for Harry K. Thaw, fencing for position in his fight to resist deportation to the United States, won an advantage today by delaying his appearance in the superior court on a writ of habeas corpus.

Dominion immigration officials and officials of Dutchess county, New York, had hoped Thaw would be produced at 10 a. m., discharged on the present defective commitment, and thus allowed to fall into their hands for deportation at a point on the border as yet undecided.

Thaw's lawyers, however, believing in the advantage of delay, declined to serve their writ on the jailer, and Thaw remained in the hospital ward cell, chatting with his brother-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. George Lauder Carnegie, who arrived last night.

Thaw's lawyers, victorious so far in the strange procedure of keeping their client in jail, agreed to announce this afternoon what disposition they purpose to make of their idle writ. If they persist in not serving it, the immigration authorities and District Attorney Conger, of Duchess county, planned to have the writ declared void and insist on Thaw's arraignment at once.

Mr. and Mrs. Carnegie spent nearly an hour with the prisoner.

"He's looking fine," said Mrs. Carnegie.

SURPRISE TO OFFICIALS.

J. D. Greenshields, of Montreal an 11th hour addition to the Thaw lawyers, pointed out that the writ was returnable at the pleasure of counsel for Thaw and that it would be best to go over his case more thoroughly before coming into court.

The move came as a surprise to the immigration officials and to District Attorney Conger and Sheriff Hornbeck, of Dutches county, N. Y. They had expected that Thaw would be arraigned before noon today, released on the present commitment, then held as an undesirable allen and quickly deported. As matters stood this forenoon indications were that this program had simply been put off a day. With Thaw once in the hands of the immigration

Battle to Death With Knives After Wednesday Night Prayer Meeting at New Hope Church

One Dead, Three Badly Stabbed in Clash in Moonlight at Church Door

Four men armed with pocket knives battled in the moonlight outside New Hope church, three miles from Marietta, after prayer meeting there Wednesday night, with the result that one is dead, another fatally wounded, and a third held in the Cobb county jail on the charge of attempt to murder.

The dead man is Bertis Leming, a youth about twenty-one years of age. J. T. McElroy, charged with his death, himself lies in his farm-house home a few miles outside Marietta with five wounds in his body and small chance for recovery.

Fred Harper is the man in jail charged with attempting McElroy's life. His brother, Roy Harper, is badly wounded at his home.

The trouble between the men is said to have started on account of McElroy's daughter. She and her father attended prayer meeting at New Hope Wednesday night. In the congregation were young Leming and the Harper brothers, his friends.

At the conclusion of the evening services McElroy and his daughter passed the Harpers and Leming just outside the church door. It is said that there had been ill feeling between McElroy and the young men for some time on account of the former's daughter, and, according to spectators, when one of the youths said something about the girl as father and daughter passed them, McElroy resented it.

Then, according to McElroy's story, all three of them drew their knives and attacked him. While women and children ran screaming back into the little church the duel in the moonlight raged on. Long before male members of the congregation could separate the combatants, Leming was lying dead on the ground. McElroy had carved his way to freedom only to faint away, and the two Harpers were cut from head to heel.

Officers from Marietta were called to the scene and took Fred Harper into custody. Following an inquest over Leming's body McElroy was charged with his death, but owing to his critical condition he could not be moved to the jail.

Roy Harper's condition was also too dangerous to allow him to be moved, so that Fred Harper, the least injured of the fighters, is the only one in custody.

Doctors say that McElroy is terribly cut, having four wounds in his shoulder, one penetrating the lung, and has only a fighting chance for life. He is conscious at intervals and was able to give his side of the story. He says that he was assaulted by all three of the young men at once.

Leming's body was taken from the blood-stained ground outside the church to the interior, where funeral services will be held.

M'KEE WILL QUIT IF CHARGE IS WITHDRAWN

Reported in Washington That Atlanta Postmaster Knows Charges Must Stick

BY RALPH SMITH.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 21.—It was learned unofficially that Hugh L. McKee, whose resignation as postmaster at Atlanta has been requested, is perfectly willing to step down and out if the post-office department will withdraw the charges that have been filed against him and will allow him to serve in the present quarter expiring September 30. It is believed this will not be done and that McKee has been informed that the postoffice department is powerless to withdraw the charges, which are based on an inspection of his office and are now of record.

It is not known how this attitude of the department will be accepted by Mr. McKee, but it is believed probable that his resignation will be submitted in a few days, if indeed it has not been forwarded already from Atlanta. The experience of Harry Stillwell Edwards, postmaster at Macon, may profit Mr. McKee. Edwards declined to resign, whereupon the president nominated Custis Nottingham as his successor, and the senate very promptly confirmed Nottingham's nomination.

SENATE RESOLUTION WOULD PLACE TROOPS IN MEXICO AT ONCE

Penrose Introduces Measure to Require Wilson to Send Armed Force to Protect American Lives and Property

WASHINGTON, Aug. 21.—Senator Penrose introduced today a resolution requiring President Wilson to take the necessary steps to place United States troops in Mexico to protect American lives and property; such a step to be decreed by the senate as in no way an unfriendly act toward Mexico.

Senator Penrose introduced also an amendment to the deficiency bill for an appropriation of $25,000,000 to be expended as the president might direct for the protection of lives of Americans in Mexico. He made no effort to secure immediate action upon his resolution and at the suggestion of Senator LaFollette it went over a day under the senate rules.

The amendment for the emergency appropriation, Senator Penrose explained, was similar to a provision in an appropriation act just prior to the Spanish war and he asked that the amendment lie on the table in the senate until the bill comes over from the house.

"The administration has asked for $100,000 to take Americans out of Mexico," said Senator Penrose after announcing he would not discuss his resolution.

HAVE RIGHT TO BE THERE.

"I think they have a right to be in Mexico. I think they have a right to be there under our treaties and under international law. We have no right to attempt to break up their homes and occupations. Rather than appropriate this pittance of $100,000 to make this wholesale removal, I would appropriate $25,000,000 to keep them where they are and to protect them."

The Penrose resolution draws attention to the Monroe doctrine and to the possibility that continued destruction of property in Mexico would "involve international complications and intervention by European nations."

The resolution specially declares that "it is not the policy of the government of the United States to recognize or assist any faction or factions in the republic of Mexico," and proposed:

"That the president of the United States be required to take such steps as are necessary to place a sufficient number of United States troops as a consabulary in the republic of Mexico, wherever and at such points as in his opinion they may be needed, prop-

HOOPER OPENS ARGUMENT FOR STATE IN ELOQUENT SPEECH

the jury, the object of this trial is to ascertain the truth and obtain justice. I want distinctly as a representative of the prosecution in this case, to have an understanding with you in the beginning. We are not seeking a verdict of guilty unless Leo M. Frank is guilty. I want it understood that the burden of proving guilt is upon our shoulders. We recognize that we must prove his guilt beyond a reasonable doubt, and we realize that the proof must be shown by the evidence. We assume this burden cheerfully. I don't think there is one connected with the prosecution who would see a single hair of the head of this unfortunate defendant harmed wrongly. We want him tried just exactly as every other defendant is tried. We want the same justice under the same law. He is entitled to the protection of the law just as every other citizen is.

NOT ENTITLED TO MORE.

"And, on the other hand, he is not entitled to any more. He is not entitled on account of his position and connections to more favor than any other defendant. The strong arm of the law is expected to reach up to the highest to drag them down to punishment as it is long into the lowliest gutters to pick up weaklings and see that justice is done to them.

"Gentlemen of the jury, I am not going to go into all the facts in this case by any means. I congratulate you that you have a year ahead of you. While you have had to do no work in this case, you have had to spend all your days listening to the evidence. You have been taken away from your families. Veritably, you have been in jail.

"It will take a little more time, and I expect you to be patient.

"There never has been a case in Georgia of more importance than this; never a more vital one for reaching in its importance rises the degree of responsibility that rests upon you, and upon all of the men connected with this case.

"Try this case according to law, and your opinion of the evidence—that is your sole duty under your oath.

SOOKING WORD HUGH.

"Now, gentlemen of the jury, I'm going to talk to you about the facts which frame, but briefly, the main; there is one other thing I want to say. This man should not be convicted because the public may want to see justice done. We are not proceeding in this case on the theory of an eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth. The law does not demand that this man be found guilty. The law demands that you find out the truth in regard to this man. If the evidence does not measure up, no court has the right to ask that you bring in a verdict against him. We are not seeking blood. We are simply trying to find the murderer of little Mary Phagan.

"On the 26th day of April let's see what the situation was. This immense factory over here on Forsyth street was being run with the knowledge of general manager, with this defendant as superintendent and with Mr. Darley as night general foreman.

"I am not proud of the conditions that existed there. What were those conditions? What was the moral atmosphere of the place? The character of the place itself is a thing that has a wonderful bearing on this case.

"They have produced twenty-five girls or more who testified that the defendant's character is good. That is, to a certain extent, necessary. They simply knew nothing against the man. But is his character good when we have brought girl after girl before you, girls who also was there—and you will notice that most of them had left there from one to two years before this crime was committed—and these young ladies told you that the character of this man was bad. You noticed the emphasis they put on the word 'bad.' The issue is for you to choose between them, between those who are there now and who say his character is good, and those who have left and say his character is bad.

LAW A LITTLE PECULIAR.

"The law is a little peculiar in regard to the introduction of character testimony. Before this trial, when we were examining the character witnesses introduced by the state, the first question we asked them was in regard to the defendant's character. We put them on notice right at the start what we wanted to find out about. Then we went into details with them in regard to particular incidents of which they had knowledge and on which they based their opinion of the defendant's character.

"Then we brought these young ladies and put them on the stand, and as you know we could ask them only certain questions and could not go into details with regard to particular incidents. But they declared that they knew all the details in regard to specific cases. They had the right to inquire of these witnesses on such grounds their beliefs and opinion of the defendant's bad character. What did they do? They dismissed the witnesses without making any inquiries.

"Not that was the only legal way by which the information in regard to specific instances could be placed before you. Under the decisions of the courts, you were shut off from this information.

ARNOLD OBJECTS TO ARGUMENT.

Attorney Arnold objected. Mr. Hooper was making what he deemed an improper argument, he said to the court. Judge Roan sustained Mr. Hooper, however.

"I repeat, gentlemen, that cross-examination by the defense was the only legal way to throw light on these incidents.

"Now, let me ask you a question: If 50 men were asked regarding the character of a certain place, and 25 of them said it was good and 25 or 15 or even 10 said it was bad, or if 50 people passing through a place, and asked 100 men in regard to the character of a man, and 90 of them told you it was good, whereas 9 or 10 of them told you it was bad, what a man because his character was bad-under those circumstances, would you be satisfied that the character of the place was good, or that you had found a man whose good character you could rely upon?

DEFENSE LET DOWN BARS.

"Under the law we were estopped from placing the character of this defendant in issue. But the defense laid down the bars, and we went in and did it. Not only have we shown his general character, but we have shown his special character as regards his relations toward women.

"No doubt, gentlemen, the situation under which this man worked was a great temptation—at least a great temptation for a man with little conscience and a great lust.

"That factory was a great place for a man of lust without conscience.

"Wasn't it a terrible place for young girls to be—there with this defendant, assisted by the noble Darley and the handsome Schiff? And all of these little girls absolutely dependent upon that trio.

"The reputation of the whole place, we find, was bad.

"We find, gentlemen of the jury, the defendant coupled up with this man Dalton—and what a fight his attorneys have made on Dalton!

"It may seem strange, gentlemen, that a man who associated with bankers, business men, and who is the head of a big concern, should have sought a man like Dalton, a man with a chainsaw record, for company. But have you ever considered that when he was dealing with a certain side of his life, with congenial pursuits, he found companions congenial in those pursuits?

A DR. JEKYL AND MR. HYDE.

"You doubtless have read 'Dr. Jekly and Mr. Hyde.' This defendant, like Dr. Jekyl, when the shades of night come, throws aside his mask of respectability and is transformed into a Mr. Hyde. And then he does not seek the companions of Dr. Jekyl, but like Hyde goes to a lower stratum where he picks up Dalton and his kind, and goes with them instead of with the men who have come here to give him a good character. Dalton, whom, you will find a man sometimes good and sometimes bad, is congenial with the bad side of this defendant.

"Now we will come back to that factory controlled by Frank.

"He pretends he did not know this little girl. He went there time and again, he passed by her machine.

"You will find he often stopped and helped her with her work in a kindly way. And you'll even find him following her out of the beaten path—this poor little child whom he pretends never there thinking he would be safe with him. You will find him telling her that he is the superintendent of the factory and that she must listen to what he says; and you find the little girl trying to get away.

"He had cast the eye of lust upon that beautiful little girl.

HAD HIS EYE ON MARY.

"And then he started laying his foundation before. He put his plans in operation. Several weeks before he remarked to Gantt, 'You seem pretty thick with little Mary.' That was

LAWYERS ASK SLATON FOR ATLANTA JUDGE

Over 200 Attorneys Sign Petition for Appointment of Local Man to Bench

A petition containing the names of over 200 members of the Atlanta Bar association was presented to Governor John M. Slaton Thursday by a committee of Atlanta lawyers, asking the governor to appoint a member of the Atlanta bar to the judgeship of the fourth division of the Fulton superior court, which was created by the recent general assembly. The only qualification named in the petition is that the appointee be a man who has practiced at least three years at the Atlanta bar.

Following are the petitions presented to the governor:

To His Excellency, Hon. John M. Slaton, Governor of the State of Georgia.

We, the undersigned committee, representing a large majority of the members of the Atlanta bar, hereby respectfully transmit to you a resolution to appoint to the recently created fourth division of our superior court an Atlanta lawyer who has practiced at this bar sufficiently long to thoroughly identify him with it, to the end that all may know that we have in our ranks men fully capable of occupying this high and responsible position. The resolution was offered at a meeting of members of the bar at which this committee was appointed and has been signed by over one-half of the bar whose names are appended thereto.

We collectively make no suggestion to you as to the appointee to be named by you, feeling sure that we can safely leave this to your judgment, particularly in view of the fact that you have for many years been one of the most active members of our bar and are, therefore, intimately acquainted with the qualifications and fitness of its members.

We think it proper also to call your attention to the fact that a compliance with this request will in no wise affect the present duties or compensation of Hon. L. S. Roan, the judge of the Stone Mountain circuit, since the act of the general assembly providing for the appointment of the fourth judge of the Atlanta circuit in no wise affects the act creating the Stone Mountain circuit, which provides that the judge of that circuit might aid in the dispatch of the business of the Atlanta circuit. The act providing for the fourth judge is in all respects similar to the act of 1909 providing for the appointment of the third judge in this circuit, and no more affects Judge Roan's position or compensation than that act did.

Hewlett, Samuel Nesbit Evins, William A. Wimbish, Robert P. Jones, Jesse M. Wood, H. M. Patty.

Whereas, a bill has been recently passed by the general assembly providing for the appointment by the governor of a fourth judge of the Atlanta circuit; and

Whereas, elevation to the bench has ever been regarded as a worthy reward for faithful, correct and efficient service as an attorney, where to such service is united good character and judicial fitness; and

Whereas, there are among the practicing lawyers of the Atlanta bar residing in Fulton county many men as fully qualified by faithfulness of service, character and judicial fitness to hold such a position as can be found in the state.

Therefore, the undersigned members of the Atlanta bar hereby petition his excellency the governor to appoint the fourth judge of the Atlanta circuit from among the practicing lawyers of the Atlanta bar who have been residents of Fulton county for a period of at least three years.

WOMAN PARALYTIC ASKS RESCUERS TO LET HER DIE

NEW YORK, Aug. 21.—Mrs. Sarah Harris, who attracted wide attention last year by an appeal to the state to kill her because she was paralyzed, was threatened with death when flames from a nearby fire crept to the windows of her room in an uptown sanitarium yesterday.

When two attendants found her she pleaded with them not to take her away. "This is the first chance I've had to die," she said. "Please let me stay here and if this room catches fire all my misery will be over." She was taken to a safe room in the institution.

FULTON TAX INCREASE HALF THAT OF GEORGIA

Gain in County Greater Than in All Others of Entire State

With tax returns in from practically the entire state, those of Fulton county show an increase in excess of the net gains of all of the counties in Georgia put together, which is thought to be a record.

While the state at large has shown a smaller gain this year than at any time since 1908, the increase shown by Fulton county has never been exceeded but once before in its history—that in 1912, when the gain was $13,630,825, against $10,823,080 for this year.

The showing is considered an excellent one for this county when it is shown that the gain is 56 per cent of the entire increase of tax values given in throughout the state. The percentage last year was 47, which was a record up to that time.

Fulton county has shown persistent gains in tax returns during the past few years while the returns from the whole state have in no manner kept pace with the bumper years of 1910-11.

The following table shows the gains of the state as compared to Fulton county from 1908 until 1913 with the percentage of the whole gain which Fulton furnishes:

Year.	Gain of State.	Fulton County.	P. C.
1913. . . .	*18,703,063	$10,823,080	56
1912. . . .	29,019,904	13,630,825	47
1911. . . .	46,551,229	10,744,620	23
1910. . . .	41,768,942	5,092,646	12
1909. . . .	19,635,772	6,281,040	32
1908. . . .	5,845,546	2,152,040	37

*There are several counties yet to be heard from this year but the result will not be materially changed.

Darktown Romance Ends When Husband Gets Roll and Flees

A Darktown romance starting brightly, but soon ending with the man getting the money and doing a Harry Thaw came to light at the police station Thursday.

Mattie Nance, who says she finds her husband has as many aliases she does not know which one to call and so keeps her malden name, told the police that she married a man under the name of Charley Jones about a month ago.

Everything went happily until last night, she says. Then she awakened with an odor of gas in her nostrils to find her husband gone. After turning off the gas she looked under her pillow for her roll of $150 and found that gone, too.

The police are searching for the man on charges of robbery and attempted murder. Mattie lives at 129 Piedmont avenue.

Nurse's Duty Came First With Bride

"Duty before the honeymoon" is a slogan that Mrs. Kirtland Kenan, formerly Miss Martha Corydon Hames, adopted Wednesday. And she intends to stick to it for some time to come.

Wednesday evening at 6 o'clock she was married to Kirtland Kenan, a well known young druggist, after having attended to her duties as visiting nurse of the Anti-tuberculosis association all day and up to a short time before the marriage.

She will not take a day off for a honeymoon. She reported for work bright and early Thursday and declared she was so interested in her work that not even the prospect of a trip to the seaside had joys for her.

The wedding was a surprise to most of the friends of Mr. and Mrs. Kenan, only twenty-five of them being notified in time to be present at the First Presbyterian church, where the ceremony was performed by Rev. Mr. Hugh K. Walker. Mrs. Kenan comes from a well known Marietta family, and has made friends in Atlanta by her splendid work in connection with the Anti-tuberculosis association.

SAVANNAH, Ga., Aug. 21.—Tomorrow morning at the Chatham county jail Frank Collier is to die for murder. He killed another negro in a fight and based his whole defense upon an alibi. When this fell down he was convicted and sentenced to hang.

Frank has been a coward until recently. Now he has confessed his crime, pleading self defense, and says he is ready to go. He holds religious song services every day with other prisoners on his tier of cells.

POPULAR SALESMAN FOUND DEAD IN ROOM

George E. McTeer Had Been Complaining of Slight Indisposition All Day

Complaining of feeling badly, George E. McTeer went to his rooms in the Hight apartments and in half an hour was found dead by a friend.

The body was found about 5:30 Wednesday afternoon by Frank Crapp, in whose apartment McTeer was staying at 167 Whitehall street. McTeer was a popular salesman at Keely company, and left there Wednesday afternoon about 5 o'clock. He went straight to his rooms on Whitehall street and told a negro girl to bring him a milk shake. She returned, but McTeer was on the bed, apparently asleep, so she did not disturb him. Later Frank Crapp entered and in attempting to arouse him made the discovery that he was dead.

The body is at Bloomfield's chapel awaiting funeral arrangements.

He is survived by his mother and two sisters of Greenfield, S. C.

NOT ENOUGH FACTS TO WARRANT TRIAL, ASSERTS ATTORNEY ARNOLD

Arnold then paid his respects to testimony obtained by "third degree" methods.

He had just promised the jury, when recess was taken, to show them the "greatest frame-up ever concocted against an innocent man."

Attorney Arnold commenced his speech by saying:

"We are all to be congratulated because this case is drawing to a close. We have all suffered by having to try this in a heated season, a case where so great time, effort and concentration was needed. We have suffered because of inadequate quarters. And we know that it is hard to give a case the proper consideration when we are cramped and uncomfortable. We all have sympathized with you gentlemen in your isolation from your families, my self a part of the jury system which must be carried out. If juries were allowed to go and mix with the people, it would be impossible for them to separate the evidence which they heard in court from the things which they heard on the streets.

"As it is, juries are, we might say, set up on a hill, where they will be away from the multitude, and where prejudices and passion cannot reach them and where they can consider a case calmly with the sole view of determining the truth.

"In the old days men were tried by judges, trained experts. But there was a desire to popularize the course of justice. As a result, part of their machinery was put in the hands of the men who come from the ranks. They are unprejudiced and unbiased, so we let them decide the facts in criminal cases, while the judge, as always, decides the law.

REFERS TO HOOPER'S SPEECH.

"My friend Hooper used a funny expression while he was speaking of law. He said that a juror is not different from any one else on the street who is trying to get at the truth. God grant that we get away from the streets! That's the use of having jurors if we don't? Why, according to him we might as well have trials on the streets, throw a man on the streets and if his friends are numerous they will save him; if not, he will be destroyed."

Mr. Hooper objected, saying that he had not used the reference to the law.

"That has been your doctrine all through this case," said Mr. Arnold, "the one that you have followed out.

"Sometimes the very nature of a crime renders it impossible to do a man charged with it justice. But time always betters that situation. Frequently we see the horror of a crime do the man charged with it a terrible injury. I wouldn't hesitate for a moment to say that a horrible crime has been committed, and that the perpetrator of that crime could be nothing but a hardened, callous, fiendish brute.

"But honors, men, gentlemen, do not say that they will hang a person because he is charged with that crime. There are cruels to say a man is guilty just as soon as he is accused. I remember an instance which my friend, the late Charley Hill, used to tell. A prospective juror was being examined and satisfactorily answered all questions up to this point when the solicitor said: 'Juror, look on the prisoner; look on him, sir.' The juror took one look and said, 'Judge, he's guilty.' That is the spirit of some people—the spirit of some bigmouthed fellows who don't even represent public sentiment. They are fellows like that man Kendley.

KENDLEY'S KENDLEYISMS.

"You can look at him and see that he has a mouth like a fish. I'm condemning him, gentlemen, guardedly and because he deserves it. I say that when Kendley remind me of the farmer with a pond. Th frogs made so much noise that he contracted to sell a man a wagonload of them. The next day he drove up to the man's house with one lone frog in the wagon. 'This frog,' he said, 'has been making all the noise. I thought there were a wagonload of them? That's the way with some bigmouthed fellows who jump to conclusions without knowing anything about the facts. They are people who wouldn't grant a man's innocence if an angel in heaven came down and told them he was guiltless.

"This man Kendley said they hung two negroes at Decatur. He said he wasn't sure whether they were guilty or not, but somebody had to be hung for it. And he said that they ought to hang this man because he's a Jew. I'd rather be in Leo Frank's shoes than his. My friend Hooper says that Frank has been calm for three and a half weeks. Gentlemen, Frank has showed fortitude which he inherited from his ancestors. There are always men willing to gentlemen anybody at whom the finger of suspicion points. Kendley is one of these men. The evidence brought him up.

RELIGIOUS PREJUDICE CHARGED.

"Leo Frank comes from a race of people that have made money. And that has made some people envious. I tell everybody, all within hearing of my voice, that if he hadn't been a Jew he never would have been prosecuted. That negro Conley has been brought into court to tell his own tale, not corroborated but prompted. I am asking my kind of people to give this man fair play. Before I'd do a Jew an injustice, I'd want my throat cut from ear to ear. This is a case that they've built up by degrees. They've got a monstrous perjurer here by the name of Conley. And they brought a man up here who before this time nobody had ever said a word against, and asked you to believe this negro against him.

"There is always such evidence in a criminal case, and always a premonition of such evidence. After the trial was in progress two or three weeks they got a lot floaters, and they testified. In my criminal experience I have seen a lot of such witnesses. I don't know whether it's imagination that makes them do it, but there is a certain class that is always ready to offer evidence. We've got a lot in this case that shouldn't be in. It's been put in to prejudice your mind against the defendant.

"In a few minutes I'm going to compare the state's witnesses and the defense's witnesses. I'm going to show that they brought the dregs of humanity, jail birds and convicts, into this case. I'm going to show every act of this defendant, misconstrued every word, tried to hasten a street car schedule, tried to show a clock to substantiate their case.

WILL STRIP THE FACTS.

"Then up into this little boy Epps to show that Mary got to town at 7 minutes after 12, and he was hardly done testifying, when they started tearing that to pieces and tried to prove that the street car was ahead of time and maybe she got there earlier. I am going to try to strip the facts in this case, if God almighty will give me power. I'm nearly worn out, Gentlemen, you swore at the beginning of this trial that you were not prejudiced, and as I look at your faces now I believe it. This jury is far above the average. I say this not in flattery, gentlemen. In all my years of experience in court, though, I have never seen a jury more intelligent.

"Now let us consider the rule under which we are trying this defendant. They've sought to draw in every other thing they could against him. It is their duty to show guilt beyond a reasonable doubt. If they don't do do that, you've got to turn him loose. If you think that Conley is as likely to be guilty as Frank, you've got to turn him loose. That latter is a logical theory."

READS DECISION.

At this juncture Attorney Arnold read a decision from a case in which the evidence was circumstantial and the verdict was turned down by the supreme court. It was to the effect that the horror of certain crimes frequently leads to beliefs which carried to the very box make the jury turn in a verdict of guilty on mere suspicion.

"It is not right to judge one solely on suspicious circumstances. The detectives and the police were put on this case to get somebody. Suspicion shifted to Tom, Dick and Harry. First they held this man Gantt, somebody said they had seen him around with the little girl that night."

Solicitor Dorsey objected. There was nothing in the evidence about that, he said.

Attorney Arnold retorted: "Well, you asked one of your officers on the stand here about that phase of the question.

"I think you mentioned a nam named Sentell."

There was a brief discussion.

"In excitement people often turn up with things that are not true. Everybody who has had any experience with courts knows this they must discriminate when anybody comes to them with remarkable tales. In this case, Gantt was suspected. And for a long time Newt Lee was suspected. Now I don't believe that Newt is guilty, but I am not certain that he didn't find the body a long time before he notified the police. There are certain things which will never let my mind be clear on that score."

Attorney Arnold recited the incident of Newt Lee saying "That means me," when Sergeant Dobbs read 'night-witch" from the note found beside the body.

WRITER OF NOTES KILLED GIRL.

"I'll never get it out of my mind that he knows something about that murder. This is one of the profoundest mysteries in criminal history. The police were baffled at every turn. One thing stood out clear, though. The man who wrote those notes killed little Mary Phagan. I don't think there is one man in a hundred who don't believe that. It looks like one negro wrote those notes to put suspicion on another. It is hard to tell what obscure thought was in the mind of the man who wrote them. The thing grew. They had Newt Lee in custody, and they put him through the third degree and the fourth degree."

Attorney Arnold interrupted himself. "And right here I want to call on your attention to a decision handed down by the court of appeals a day or two ago regarding the third degree."

Attorney Arnold read it to the jury. It was an arraignment of the police method of questioning prisoners in order to get confessions from them.

"How that does it Jim Conley!" said Mr. Arnold. "Conley and the powers that made him swear! Conley was put through tortures that flourished in the Spanish inquisition chambers. And so was this negress Minola McKnight.

WICKED INVOLVE INNOCENT.

Continuing his reading of the court of appeals decision, Attorney Arnold laid particular stress on the words, "The wicked do not hesitate to involve the innocent, in order that they themselves may escape."

"My Brother Hooper said that Conley had nothing to hold him on the stand but the truth," said Attorney Arnold. "My God, he had the desire to save his own neck. What stronger motive could a man have on the stand? This whole case against Frank is based on Jim Conley's story. If the prosecution can't bolster up a conviction on that rotten crutch, then they know they will fail.

"Before I get through I'm going to show you that there was never such a frame-up against a man since God made the world than they have concocted against this defendant. And I'm not afraid to stand in my place and point to the men who had a hand in it."

Marsha Warrington's Companion Found Guilty of Violating White Slave Law

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 21.—With Maury I. Diggs convicted and awaiting sentence for having violated the Mann white slave act in eloping with Marsha Warrington from Sacramento, Cal., to Reno, Nev., the government turned its attention to Diggs' companion in flight, F. Drew Caminetti, indicted for having taken Lola Norris on the same excursion to Reno. Diggs was released at midnight on $20,000 bail, furnished by his father, I. P. Diggs, and uncle, Marshall Diggs. He will be sentenced to the penitentiary on September 2. Five years for each of the four counts on which he was convicted is the maximum penalty.

Although Diggs was regarded as the leader in the interstate jaunt the trial of Caminetti will command exceptional attention owing to the fact that he is the son of Anthony Caminetti, a leader in state and national politics and the present commissioner general of immigration.

When United States District Attorney John L. McNab (resigned) brought the Diggs-Caminetti cases into national prominence by accusing the attorney general's office of having delayed the trial for political reasons, Commissioner Caminetti figured in the explanation or the delay. His chief, Secretary of Labor Wilson stated he had requested postponement until Commissioner Caminetti, who was eager to return to San Francisco from Washington to aid his son, could familiarize himself with his duties.

Friends of Caminetti were depressed today over Diggs' conviction and by the attitude of the court toward that defendant. Judge Va Fleet, who also will try Caminetti, said in his charge to the Diggs jury:

"If you find that the defendant and his companion Caminetti were actuated in their departure on flight from Sacramento by a fear of exposure or arrest, but that nevertheless, in taking these two girls along, there existed the intention to subject them to the immoral purpose charged, the defendant is guilty."

CITIZENS OF MISSOURI WIELD PICK AND SHOVEL

Good Roads Campaign Continues With Unabated Enthusiasm

(By Associated Press.)

KANSAS CITY, Aug. 21.—Encouraged with results of their efforts yesterday when, according to Governor Major's information, 200 miles of new highway was built, Missouri's good roads army started forth again today.

Although the number of volunteers who engaged in the first day's campaign exceeded expectations, reports from nearly every county indicated that a large number were wielding picks and shovels today. In some districts farming operations practically were suspended as the farmers decided the road improvement was the most important in which they could engage.

Governor Major, who, with Governor Hodges, of Kansas, and Governor Gilbert early today to resume active work on the roads, was elated with the results.

"The first of Missouri's two good roads days was marked by success that it exceeded our anticipations," he said.

"In addition to the 200 miles of new road in our highway system, repairs were made upon hundreds of miles of old roads. I am pleased also with the splendid road spirit that has been developed."

Governor Asks Other States to Co-operate

(By Associated Press.)

JEFFERSON CITY, Aug. 21.—Encouraged by the success of Missouri's good roads days, Governor Major announced this afternoon that he would ask each state in the union to join in the movement next year.

"At least 250,000 Missourians have labored during our two good roads days," said the governor, "making a total of half a million days' work on our state roads that will have been completed this evening.

The governor's statement included an expression of thanks to the women of Missouri for their co-operation.

W. & A. EARNINGS SHOW BIG INCREASE IN YEAR

Gain in Gross Earnings Is $270,892.54, Three Times That of Other Roads

Large gains over the year previous are shown in the gross and net earnings of the Western and Atlantic road, in the annual report submitted to the state rail ad commission Thursday afternoon by the assistant comptroller of the property.

The gain in the gross earnings is $270,892.54 and the net earnings, are $94,665.14 for 1913 as against the year 1912. The advance in gross earnings per mile is $1,979.92 and the net $691.96.

In this connection it was pointed out by Campbell Wallace, secretary of the railroad commission, that the gross earnings per mile of the Western and Atlantic are nearly three times as much as those of the Southern, Central of Georgia and Atlantic Coast Line railroads. The earnings of these roads is approximately $8,000 each, as against the $23,327.27 shown in the report just received. The net earnings per mile show, the same ratio in comparison to the roads mentioned.

The only improvement to the property shown by the report is the laying of a little over a mile of side track which brings the total rail mileage up to 136.36 as compared to 170.26 miles in 1912.

Following is the financial report in full:

Operating expenses, 1913, $2,279,-820.76; 1912, $2,163,594.36.

Gross earnings per mile, 1913, $23,-337.27; 1912, $21,357.35.

Operating expenses per mile 1913, $16,662.92; 1912, $15,874.76.

Net earnings per mile, 1913, $6,674.35; 1912, $5,982.45.

It is a noteworthy fact that despite the increase in operating expenses as shown in the foregoing figures, a large gain was nevertheless registered, which would indicate that the state's property is yearly becoming more valuable as an asset to Georgia.

The rent derived by the state for the Western and Atlantic road is $420,012 annually, paid by its lessee, the Nashville, Chattanooga and St. Louis railroad. Subtracting this from the net earnings of the property it is seen that the profit into the coffers of the lessee was in the neighborhood of a half million dollars.

This lease expires in 1919 and in view of this there was appointed by the speaker of the house and the president of the senate, a committee to investigate into the terms of a new lease and make such recommendations as it sees fit to the next session of the legislature. The chairman is Barry Wright, of Rome, Floyd county.

PEACHTREE CREEK TO BE CLEARED OUT SOON

Creek Will Carry Away All Trash Resulting From Sewerage Beds Overflow

From interviews with members of the county commission and city commissioners in charge of the construction of the city's new sewerage beds on Peachtree creek, it seems certain that the creek will soon be cleared so that it will carry away effulgent resulting from the overflow of th esewerage beds which will be put in operation within two weeks.

The county has not already commenced the work of clearing the creek, says Commissioner Winn, because the city representatives have not approached them officially on the subject. When informed of this Engineer Clayton, in charge of the construction of the beds, declared the matter would be taken up fully with the county commission at its next meeting.

As it seems all the county officials needed was notification to commence the work, and the city officials will notify them at the earliest opportunity, it is almost certain that the creek will be properly cleared at an early date.

WINN TALKS.

When Engineer Winn, chief of the work of construction of the new sewerage disposal beds, was informed that Commissioner Winn said the county commission had not been officially approached in regard to the clearing of the creek, Mr. Winn said: "There is a misunderstanding somewhere."

"Although I have not formally approached the county commission while in meeting in regard to this matter, I have done what I considered necessary to induce them to take proper action.

"I personally saw practically every one of them and explained why the creek should be cleared and urged the necessity of action. I also went before the court and showed it why the driftwood that has accumulated in the creek should be removed. I showed why this ought to be done in order to make successful the operation of the city's new $250,000 disposal plant.

"The plant will be ready for operation in September. Action ought to be taken immediately. In order to remove any responsibility for delay from our shoulders I will immediately prepare and put before the county commission a plain statement of the facts. I will also send a copy of this statement to the chairman of the bond commission, which is largely charged with the success of the sewerage disposal plant, as it is being erected with a part of the bond money voted for that purpose.

"The necessity of immediate action cannot be too strongly urged. This detail ought to be attended to at once. I will ask the bond commission and the board of county commisioners to get together at ofice, and see to it that action is taken."

Chairman Quillian, of the bond commission, was interviewed and made this statement:

"I will call a meeting of the bond commission at once so that formal action may be taken in this matter. I understand that the county commissioners' committee on public improvements meets Saturday morning and between now and then the bond commission will endeavor to put in as strong language as it knows how the importance of completing this work before the sewerage disposal plant is put in operation.

"I am confident," continued Mr. Quillian, "that the members of that committee will easily see why they ought to attend to this matter immediately in order to make successful the operation of a plant that has cost the city upwards of $300,000. Their part in the matter is a trivial detail, but their failure to attend to it might be met with disastrous results to the city."

ARRESTED IN CHARLOTTE FOR THEFT IN ATLANTA

W. E. Morton, Electrician, Accused of Stealing Motorcycle Here

W. E. Morton, a young white man who says he is an electrician from New York, was brought from Charlotte, N. C., to Atlanta Wednesday on a warrant issued from a justice court.

Morton was arrested in Charlotte on Tuesday when he was ready to board a train for New York, preparing to make his trip on $75 secured from the sale of a motorcycle. The motorcycle bore a Georgia number, and this aroused the suspicion of Charlotte officers.

They telegraphed to Atlanta and found that a motorcycle answering the description of the one held there had been stolen from an Atlanta dealer. Morton was immediately arrested and held awaiting the arrival of Officer Hollingsworth.

Max Wright, of 82 Marietta street, identified the young man as one who came to him Saturday and asked to look at a motorcycle. He looked over several and said he wanted to see how one worked. Wright says he allowed him to do that and that neither motorcycle nor young man showed up at his shop again.

CHIEF TELLS REFORMER VICE WAR WAS SUCCESS

Beavers Writes New Orleans Woman That Atlantians Are Pleased

Shreveport, La., is the latest city to ask Chief Beavers for information regarding Atlanta's method of handling the vice question. A letter from Mrs. Randall Hunt, president of the co-operative protective society of that place, was received Thursday.

"Abolish it entirely, and do not temporize a single day," is the message the return mail bears to Mrs. Hunt's question as to whether it is advisable to go about the matter gradually, by first establishing a restricted district and then gradually abolishing that.

Chief Beavers, in his letter, tells Mrs. Hunt that the people of Atlanta are highly pleased with the summary way the authorities her handled the vice question. He declares this method is eminently successful.

EVERY GENERAL BILL APPROVED BY SLATON

Chief Executive Completes Big Task Six Hours Before Time-Limit Expired

Shortly before 6 o'clock Wednesday afternoon Governor John M. Slaton completed his task of signing the remaining bills and joint resolutions passed at the session of the legislature just ended. Every general bill was approved by the chief executive and many of votal interest to the state became laws automatically with the affixing of the official signature.

But one measure was disapproved by the governor, that a local resolution directing the secretary of state to grant certain lands in Chatham county, not to exceed 5,000 acres, to the trustees of the Chatham academy.

A careful perusal of this resolution showed that while it had been passed in the house, it had been read but twice in the senate and had never been voted on by the upper assembly.

For this and other potent reasons the governor determined to withnold final action on the matter until the next session of the general assembly.

Old City Ordinance May Bar Judge Preston

After repeated clashes in open court with Recorder Pro Tem Preston, in which he challenged the ability of the acting recorder, Attorney Billy Smith declares he has rummaged through old ordinances until he has found an act that makes Mr. Preston's actions as recorder illegal.

According to Attorney Smith this old ordinance provides that during the absence of the recorder an alphabetical roll call be held of the city council each morning asking whether the individual member wishes to serve as recorder that day. This ordinance has not been complied with, says Smith, and he threatens to have declared illegal all actions of the acting recorder.

The Need of Highway Statistics.

Much valuable work has been done, notably by the United States Bureau of Roads and by the American Association for Highway Improvement, in the gathering of statistics on the mileage of improved and unimproved public roads. We are thus able to determine in a fairly accurate way the general progress of most of the States in highway improvement. But there is manifest need of records that will be more complete and detailed in order that the task of road building in each locality and in the nation as a whole may be reduced to a more definite and businesslike basis. The Chattanooga News reasonably remarks in this connection that:

"There must be a careful classification of roads, according to condition, construction and maintenance costs, material used, horse-drawn and motor traffic, heavy and light hauling, relation to population and trade. This work would expand naturally into a history of roads and roadmaking in America and it would offer invaluable suggestions to future roadmakers. Each State should undertake this work at once and the United States Bureau of Good Roads could lend invaluable assistance by mapping out a plan of the census and perhaps by making a model census in a restricted area. The automobile clubs and associations could do a service whose value to the community could not be overestimated if they should undertake to make this road survey, in co-operation with the Bureau of Good Roads and the State highway commissioners, or other officials designated by the Governor. They would be helping themselves and would find the work agreeable and instructive, as well as public-spirited."

Work such as this clearly requires the service of a State highway commission or some kindred agency; and here we may observe for the thousandth or, perhaps, ten-thousandth time that Georgia is utterly lacking in facilities of this kind. We have no provision whatsoever for compiling roadway statistics. We know in a general way that much good work is being done in the individual counties but the counties themselves have little means of learning precisely what is being accomplished within their own borders, much less by their neighbors. The money and labor Georgia is spending on roads will never yield due results until we have some system of State highway supervision.

With money to move the crops the per capita circulation can take care of itself.

Thaw couldn't expect New England to be very hospitable toward a mere Pittsburger.

The Lesson of Kansas.

Kansas seems at length to have found a precious jewel in its adversity. The recent drought has kindled a popular realization of the dire need of a permanent, dependable water supply. The State has suffered bitterly but if its ordeal leads to practical measures against another such disaster, the value of its lesson will far outweigh the cost.

Men will never become independent of nature but they are continually learning how to utilize nature, so that sun and rain and wind instead of being the capricious tyrants they once were are made joint laborers in human tasks. Providence has stepped down from the sky and in the role of scientist or engineer is working in the homeliest ways its wonders to perform. Such an experience as Kansas has just emerged from is not considered as an inscrutable visitation to which poor mortals must be meekly resigned but as a work-a-day problem which should be and can be solved by energy and foresight.

The people of that rich grain-producing State are accordingly casting about for feasible means to protect their crops and other interests against future droughts. They have found, as the Kansas City Star says, that they cannot depend upon ordinary wells and ponds for water. "The wells and ponds have a tendency to go dry in dry weather and that is the kind of weather that produces the need for water. Possibly the wells and ponds would answer the purpose if they were of the right sort, but the majority of them are of the wet weather kind. There is water in them when there is plenty of water everywhere else. The city water supplies of a number of cities were constructed on the same plan—the plan of getting plenty of water during wet seasons."

It is estimated that the agricultural loss from the recent drought would more than suffice to provide every farm and town with a water supply that would be proof against prolonged rainless seasons. Whatever the cost, it would be negligible beside desolation which continued neglect of this problem will entail.

Georgia's Increased Corn Acreage.

As blithe a bit of news as Georgians have had in many a day is the announcement from the agricultural department that the State's corn acreage for 1913 exceeds that of the preceding year by more than six hundred and seventy-eight thousand acres. The hopeful significance of this record goes further than the farm; it reaches every sphere of industry and commerce and foretells a time of richer prosperity for the people's common interests.

There were cultivated in Georgia last year three million, three hundred and eighty-three thousand and sixty-one acres of corn; this year four million, sixty-one thousand, four hundred and twelve acres have been planted. The difference is not to be reckoned in bushels and dollars alone, though in that respect its importance is far-reaching, but chiefly in the larger ideas and the quickened progress which are thus revealed. Georgia's production of corn when measured by that of the country at large or by her own needs and possibilities is still lamentably small. But the notable and cheering fact is that within a twelvemonth she has moved splendidly forward. Her farmers have caught the message of a new gospel of agriculture and living forth its truth.

The effect of an increased corn acreage on the State's economic welfare can scarcely be overgauged, either in extent or in variety. It has been estimated that Georgia lacks more than thirty-seven million dollars annually of making enough money out of the cotton crop to pay for the food supplies imported from distant quarters. Last year alone our people spent something like a hundred and seventy million dollars for corn, hay, oats, meat and other necessaries that could be raised easily and cheaply at home. This condition of affairs presents a very vital problem. It means that the State is agriculturally dependent whereas by every natural circumstance it should be free and self-sustaining. It means that we buy more than we sell, that we are living far above our income, yet far below our resources. There is but one way out of such a difficulty and that lies in producing at home those great food staples which we now purchase abroad.

The production of corn is especially needful because this product is the basis of many activities that must be fostered before the State attains its due measure of thrift and self reliance. Until Georgia raises an adequate supply of corn, oats, hay and forage, she can offer but scant encouragement to the livestock industry which, as everyone realizes, must be developed. We are now short some forty-eight million dollars worth of corn each year with comparatively few animals to feed. What a great increase, then, must there be in the production of corn, if stock raising is to have a chance! The State of Iowa whose area is about the same as Georgia's and whose soil and climate are no more advantageous than ours, if as much so, is producing an average of thirty-six bushels of corn to the acre and at the same time is selling annually two hundred million dollars worth of animal products.

Evidently, therefore, upon an increase in Georgia's corn yield depends the progress of divers other enterprises that will add to the State's wealth, reduce the cost of living, develop our natural resources and usher in a new era of freedom and prosperity. Hence the announcement that some six hundred and seventy-eight thousand more acres of corn are under cultivation this year than last is one of extraordinary significance. It indicates a breaking-away from the old tyranny of the one-crop idea. It assures us that the farmer is realizing the cost and folly of staking his all upon cotton and is turning more largely to the home production of food supplies.

Credit for this new and better tendency is due largely to the work of the Boys' Corn Clubs. It is to those young and valiant crusaders and to our State system of agricultural education that we must give thanks for the constructive changes that are coming to pass.

Indications are that the price of cotton will permit the farmer to meet the high cost of living and invest in an automobile, too.

In saying that Wilson lacks the support of the American people, President Huerta disagrees with some ninety million or so Americans.

Many a man has collected the money on the supposition that he possessed good judgment, when, as a matter of fact, he merely made a good guess.

Chicago has voted against the use of slang by baseball writers, and the result brings out a peculiar trait of human nature. College professors voted for slang, and baseball managers and players against it. Which is verging on the old idea that the shoemaker has holes in his shoes and the tailor wears hand-me-downs.

Music of the Rain

There is the music of the spheres and "the sweet sound that breathes upon a bank of violets." Between the music so overmastering that the finite ear cannot encompass it and the music so soft that only the attuned ear gets it, what other melody is the most delightful?

Wouldn't you say it was the rain pattering on the roof or tinkling on the pavement, or running the full range of chords in the grass and leaves?

There is "the still, sad music of humanity." There is "music that gentler falls than petals from blown roses on the grass"—than "tired eyelids upon tired eyes." There are the unheard melodies of pastoral pipers upon Grecian urns. The voice of the mother singing to the baby is more beautiful than these. And there are anthems, sung by full choruses in resonant cathedrals.

Still you would give your choice to the music of the rain. It lulls the fretful baby and the weary mother, too. It harmonizes the waking moment with the moment of sleep. It joins child and mother and man, and birds and beasts and the tiny inhabitants of the grass, and the grass and the trees, and country and town, in one great Te Deum in one great cathedral.—Kansas City Star.

OUR DAILY BREAD

IX—YEAST AND LEAVEN.

By Frederic J. Haskin

Yeast is literally as old as the world itself. It is found in the air we breathe. Set a dish of crushed fruit in the open air. Before it be originally free from yeast, in a short time alcoholic fermentation, which can be caused only by yeast germs, will begin. This yeast, found in the air, is the wild yeast from which all other yeasts are cultivated. The Egyptians doubtless were the first people to cultivate yeast, if not to produce leavened or raised bread. They secured a bit of live wild yeast by the fermentation of some vegetable body, either fruit or grain, and set it in dough. A portion of this dough was then saved from one baking to another, constituting the "leaven which leavened the whole" referred to in the Scripture. Some loaves of bread baked over 4,000 years ago have been found in Egyptian tombs and subjected to microscopic examination. The yeast germs were found plainly visible.

• • •

The continuation of yeast by saving a portion of the sponge from one baking to another was known to every American housewife of the past generation. The Patent yeasts, some of which are so perfect in their chemical parts, are a modern development. Some housewives still use the wet or potato yeast, also known as "sots," which is made simply by taking a little of the prepared liquor, consisting principally of potato to which yeast has been added, and permitting it to ferment sufficiently to be used to start the sponge for the bread. "Sots" is a form of yeast especially in favor among Pennsylvania housewives of German extraction, and it was not unusual for a woman to preserve her "sots" from one baking day to another without a single break in the chain of its century. A mother gave a "starter" to her daughter when she married, and the daughter each week boiled the potatoes for a fresh output until she, too, was ready to pass over her "sots" to her own daughter.

• • •

Another form of yeast familiar to the old housewife, especially in New England, is the "dry rising," which was started either from some yeast or from a small quantity of "dry rising" of the same kind. To make this yeast a small amount of flour was scalded by a strong tea made from hops. Cold water added to make it lukewarm and enough additional flour to make a batter similar to the sponge used in baking bread. This was kept in a warm place until it had acquired the necessary amount of fermentation and sufficient corn meal added to make a piece of stiff dough. This was molded by hand into little cakes an inch or more in diameter. These were spread out to dry in some fairly warm place where there was a good circulation of air and no dampness. When properly made "dry rising," sometimes a dozen or more years will keep for months. One or two cakes are sufficient for a family baking. Before the advent of the compressed yeast in the grocery store many a woman was able to make a liberal allowance of pin money by making "dry rising" for her neighbors.

• • •

Modern science has made it possible for the large yeast manufacturer to know absolutely the quality of his yeast because by microscopic and chemical test he is able to ascertain its exact condition. Compressed yeast is now made into small air-proof and damp-proof packages and sent by fast express *even to re*mote villages. It is the development of the modern yeast factory as well as the improved quality of flour which has made possible the perfection of the modern loaf of bread.

• • •

A large yeast plant is full of surprises to the average visitor who looks upon yeast as a small matter. A track at one side of an immense building furnishes accommodation for the cars loaded with corn, barley and malt, which form the basis of the yeast process. his grain must be of the highest quality and is raised to the storage room at the top of the building by means of grain elevators similar to those in use in mills. It is subjected to the most scientific tests before being placed in the crusher where it is thoroughly macerated. Distilled water is added to the grain, together with the yeast germs needed to start the fermentation. The mash is kept in huge tanks, having a capacity of hundreds of barrels, at an evenly regulated temperature until the fermentation process is completed. This is determined by the gauge along the side of the tanks which are of copper and built in tiers of carefully reinforced metal. A register inside of the tank indicates the height of the coffee-colored mixture caused by the fermentation of the grain and water. When the fermentation has reached the proper point by scientific test the liquid, which resembles a quantity of frothy beer, is drawn off, leaving the bulky portion of the grain. This grain is dried and shipped away for cattle food.

• • •

The beer-like liquid is drawn into another tank and submitted to another fermentation, after which all the solids are extracted from it. These form the yeast used by the baker. This yeast goes through several processes by which all excess moisture is squeezed out by elaborate machinery and great masses of it are sent to the molding room to be molded into blocks. This yeast is a creamy, gray substance resembling stiff putty in appearance. The molding room is kept at a low temperature by a liberal use of ice, to supply which requires the product of a good sized ice plant connected with the yeast factory. A thoroughly equipped chemical laboratory and a staff of expert chemists are a necessary part of the yeast plant equipment, and the different rooms in which the processes of yeast making take place are kept at an absolutely even temperature for each separate process. For fermentation a blood heat is desirable. After this has taken place and the yeast germs have been extracted, the concluding process of molding and boxing for shipment must be done in a cool room kept absolutely chilled by a requisite refrigerating system.

• • •

The by-products of a yeast factory are worthy of attention. In addition to the utilization of the grain for cattle food, the liquid remaining after the extraction of the yeast germs is also of value. The fermentation process has developed a considerable quantity of alcohol which is secured by passing it through the separator. After the alcohol has been taken out it goes through another process which turns it into a white vinegar.

• • •

The utmost care is observed throughout the whole process of yeast making. The grain and water are weighed with as much care as the ingredients used in bread making. The machinery is most intricate, calling into play a number of powerful engines to supply the power for keeping the liquid in motion during fermentation.

• • •

The qualities of the bread depends absolutely upon the yeast. The best kind of flour will not produce good bread if it does not have proper yeast to raise it, while with good yeast and a little care even a poor grade of flour frequently can be made to produce a fair quality of bread. When yeast made in the scientific yeast factory can be supplied by the grocer for a couple of cents, few women make their own yeast.

• • •

Most bakers now depend upon the manufactured yeast also. It comes to them perfectly fresh each day and saves much labor and anxiety in the bakery. Careful tests have proved that a single pound of yeast made in this manner is capable of raising 400 pounds of dough, and the economy of having such concentrated strength appeals to the average progressive bread maker. The scientific exactness which has been secured in the development of yeast making is indicated by the statement recently made that 2,136,941,500 yeast cells are required to properly raise a single pound of flour, and that a pound of the yeast secured by extracting the germs from the liquid contains 611,720,-0-4,000 cells.

The Handwriting on the Wall

BY DR. FRANK CRANE.

(Copyright, 1913, by Frank Crane.)

New York, the greatest state in the union, is writing history these days in big red letters, as lurid as those that appeared on the wall of the banqueting room of the king of Babylon. The monarch and his soothsayers could not read them then. The people of the United States cannot read now the meaning of the bloody inscription.

It means this experiment of popular government in the New World is doomed to increasing shame and scandal, and eventually to complete breakdown, if we cannot agree together for the common cause of honest government; and to abandon the humbug and claptrap of the Republican, Democratic, Progressive, Socialist and other parties.

The party politics is as destructive to the idea of any real democracy as sectarianism is destructive to any idea of real religion.

At present we witness a dirty, sickening spectacle in the capital city of New York. A governor has refused to obey the organization that controls his party. He is being politically assassinated by all the methods of blackmail as ruthlessly as the Medici or the Borgias of Italy put their enemies out of the way.

In all this tragedy the People have little interest except as spectators. They never chose Sulzer; he was put in office by an organization which has entire control of the system of nomination and election.

The legislature at Albany are not the representatives of the People. They are the creatures of political organization whose power lies in bamboozling the People, whose opportunity is found only in the ignorance, indifference and absenteeism of the People.

Therefore the whole imbroglio is, to the People, but a quarrel of angry beach combers over the wreckage of the state, the wranglings and tearings of hungry coyotes over the carcass of popular government.

Whichever way it turns out makes little difference. Tammany Murphy or Republican Barnes is no more to the People than a feudal baron was to his villians. In both cases the governing power was obtained by men strong and unscrupulous enough to dominate a People too stupid to understand how to govern themselves.

So long as the People despise the very principles upon which the government rests—to wit, an active interest in public affairs by every citizen; so long as they bring up their children in mediaevally monarchic public schools where their own initiative is persistently suppressed; so long as they condemn politics, avoid their public parties and leave government in the hands of political parties and their secret supporters, the massed wealth of those who fatten on privilege; so long as the People will not realize that "eternal vigilance is the price of liberty," and eternal activity, interest, and energy the price of any real "government by the People, of the People, and for the People"—just so long will such handwritings as those now blazing at Albany be seen upon the walls.

"And this is the writing that was written: Mene, mene, tekel, upharsin. This is the interpretation of the thing—Mene: God hath numbered thy kingdom and finished it.

"Tekel: Thou art weighed in the balances, and art found wanting.

"Peres: Thy kingdom is divided, and given to the Political Grafter on the one hand, and the criminal rich and the criminal poor on the other."

Any other than a government by the People is a government by Criminals.

Why Women Tire of Staying at Home

(Youth's Companion.)

A man goes home tired from his day's work and wonders why his wife wants to go somewhere in the evening. "Why go out?" he says. "You must dress up, and put on airs and manners, and talk dreary nothings to those who talk dreary nothings back to you. Here is a delightful home to take your case in, a cheerful fire, an uncut magazine, a drowsy armchair. Why go out?"

The man does not stop to think that the woman has worked all day to make the home delightful, has laid the fire, has dusted the armchair, besides doing a thousand other things to enable him to enjoy his uncut magazine in slumerous peace. She likes a quiet evening, too, but occasionally she likes something else.

"Women haven't the home feeling," says Jones to Robinson. "Why, when I take a vacation, I want nothing better than to stay right at home, with the children, and potter around the place. I hoe a little, I carpenter a little—there are always a lot of odd Jobs waiting.

"The two weeks are over before I know it. But Mary, she's different. She likes to pack her trunk and go to one of those summer hotels where you wear your best clothes and talk all day." And Robinson agrees that women haven't the home feeling.

No home feeling! To a true married woman home is indeed her world. But it is a world of care as well as a world of happiness. She never returns to it with the infinite sense of relaxation that her husband feels. No matter how tired she is, there is, from the minute she unlocks the door, something to attend to, something on her mind. What wonder is it that she wants to roam a little, if only for the pleasure of coming back.

The next time your wife asks you to take her out for an evening, do not grumble, but consider how you would like it if, after you had done a hard day's work, she came into your office at 5 o'clock and suggested your passing the evening there with a magazine or two. A woman's home is her place of business.

The Conning Tower

BY FRANKLIN P. ADAMS.

OH, FOR A LODGE IN SOME VAST WILDERNESS!

In winter when the window- shut
The riveters are quiet; but
In summer quite the other way—
They rat-a-tat-a-tat- all day.

We should like to read a scientific article on the psychology of noises. Why some noises seem personal and tend to distract; and why others bother not at all. The riveting racket seems particularly malicious; and, familiar as it is, what with five scrapers built in four years in a periphery of half a mile, it seems terrible and new and mocking each time.

One thinks of an answer to a conundrum, however. Fix up the question yourself. One is as right as a trivet and the other is as trite as a rivet.

THE DIARY OF OUR OWN SAMUEL PEPYS.

August 15.—To the tennis-court and played with Mistress Alice and then into the smooth lake and to Mistress Florence's for luncheon and riding in her petroleum-waggon and then Tom and I did carry my wife's trunk to the boat and so we to the steam-train and early to-bed, and I did sleep well, despite traveling through the mountains, nor did awake until I came to Yonkers.

16.—Up early and home for breakfast where I did get some of Lena's coffee, the first in a seven-night. To my office and read all my letters, very many and very cheering to get, too, and thence to the ballpark with J. Wise and I wagered £2 the Pittsburgs would prevail over the Giants, which they did, and I glad of it. In the evening to the playhouse to see Mr. Glass's play "Potash & Perlmutter" and liked it hugely, in especiall Mr. Barney Barnard. And I saw Mary Caroline Glass, too, looking the prettiest I have seen her and very proud, too, but knowing not whether she was prouder of her husband or little son or child, James. To a place where we had a mixture of lemon-squash and ginger-beer, and I saw there Mistress Joan Seymour, dancing beautifully, and she has, I think, as fair a face as any ever I saw, save one.

17.—Lay late and finished May Sinclair's "The Combined Maze" and liked it greatly as I do all her work, it being done with great art. Came then Mistress Edna Aug and we had supper and much diverting discourse and her I found to have a keen and searching mind, besides a merry wit.

On this lovely August morning, when the office temperature is fahrenheiting scandalous and the riveters are shredding one's nerves, it is a sweetly column thought that in 1852 Mr. Wilson, 216 Bowery, had for sale "Cutlery, Hardware, English and American Britannia Ware, Tin Ware, German Silver Ware, Wooden Ware, Brushes, Dining and Desert Knives and Forks, Cooks' Butchers' and Bread Knives, Scissors, Shears, Steel and Iron Knives Trays, Lamps, Candlesticks, Hammers, Hatchets, Axes, Pots, Kettles, Pans, Stair Rods, Stair rod Eyes, Shovels, Spades, Coffee, Tea and Water Pots, Sugar and Cream, Table and Tea Spoons, Soup and Gravy Ladles, Pitchers, Goblets, Cups, Casters, Lamps, Candlesticks German Silver Goods, Spoons, Butter Knives, Sugar Tongs, Snuffers, Trays, Spittoons, Lamps, Candlesticks, Match Boxes, Summer Ovens, including Basins, Pots, Pans, Boxes, Lanterns, Brushes for Windows, Floor, Clothes, Hair, or Teeth, Wash Tubes, Boards, Bowls, Pails, Boxes and Step Ladders."

Mr. Wilson is dead and the shop is no more. Wherefor we are sorrowful. We wanted to know whether he used to sell collenders.

All the Presidential News from Cornish.

Sir: Considering what Congress is doing to the tariff and what the newspapers are doing to Mexico, I am acting on the rumor current in Cornish that the President will not enjoy his summer till fall and am asking you for another leave of absence. In fact I have already taken it, and I am in Cornish, Conn. I might report from here that I overheard some children, who had been finding little crabs on the beach, compete in naming their captives. "Betty," "Tom," "Cinderella," "Hop-o'-My-Thumb," "Fido," came the voices, and then finally, in the youngest, proudest treble of all—"Votes for Women." I had to interfere, however, and ask that the name be altered to "Anti-Suffrage," explaining that otherwise the little crab would be most uncomfortable. For how could "Votes for Women" walk backward? The children answered "How!" Yours off and on the job,

BILL PASSED, BUT THE GOVERNOR WON'T SIGN IT

Because Read Only Twice in Senate, Myrick Measure Won't Become Law

More than usual interest has been manifested in the curious advent into the governor's office of a resolution by Shelby Myrick, of Chatham, that while read three times and passed in the house unanimously, was only read the second time in the senate and marked "concurred in." The fact that the measure had the effect of a law made its third reading imperative, and lacking that, it failed in enactment.

The resolution as prepared by Mr. Myrick seeks to regain 5,000 acres of certain lands in Chatham which ownership was vested in certain institutions, known as the trustees of the Chatham academy and thereafter in certain commissioners for the benefit of the Union society of Savannah, Ga., of which C. H. Dorsett, is the sole surviving member.

Mr. Myrick asks that the acts approved February 1, 1788, December 21, 1829, and March 1, 1856, relative to the vacant lands in Chatham county be declared now in full force and effect, and that Phillip Cook, the secretary of state, be authorized and directed to issue the grants for the lands in question, first to the trustees of the Chatham academy and thereafter to Mr. Dorsett.

In declining to sign the resolution, Governor Slaton made the following written comment on a fly page of the measure:

JOHNSON TELLS LOBBY PROBERS OF THREATS

Congressman's Life Was Threatened Because of Federal Loan Shark Bill

WASHINGTON, Aug. 21.—Representative Benjamin Johnson, of Kentucky, told the lobby investigators today that the passage of the federal loan shark bill was marked with daily threats against his life. He introduced an affidavit by a former capital policeman who swore that another former policeman claimed to have followed Johnson three nights to kill him.

Testimony has developed that the loan sharks fought the law with a slush fund of $12,000. Representative J. T. McDermott, of Illinois, was charged by I. H. McMichael, a former house employe, with having received $7,500.

PROF. A. A. BELL DIES AT SANITARIUM

Prof. Albert A. Bell, a prominent Georgia educator, died Thursday morning at a private sanitarium in the city.

Prof. Bell had devoted the best part of his life to active teaching in Georgia and North Carolina schools. He had been superintendent of the Sparta, Ga., public schools for two years and had been re-elected to a third term.

About a week ago he came to Atlanta with his wife and brother, J. C. Bell, to have an operation performed for appendicitis, from the effects of which he died.

He is survived by his wife, his mother and two children. The body is at Barclay & Brandon's chapel and will be taken to Sparta, Ga., for funeral and interment.

ATLANTA BANKS GET $750,000 DEPOSITS

(By Associated Press.)

WASHINGTON, Aug. 21.—The treasury department today began making deposits of the additional $50,000,000 government funds that are to be placed with banks in the agricultural states to aid in the movement.

The first deposits were made in the reserve cities in the southern states among which, it is unofficially stated, were Baltimore, Md., Richmond, Va., Atlanta, Ga., and Memphis Tenn. the three latter each receiving $750,000.

The apportionment of the funds has been completed according to information at the department. It was stated unofficially that the largest deposits would be made with the national banks at Chicago, this being the most important reserve city in the agricultural states. The largest deposits are to be made in St. Louis, with Baltimore second, and New Orleans third.

The amount of cash which the robbers obtained will not be known until an inventory is taken, but the total will reach several thousand dollars.

SPEER CHARGES TO BE CONSIDERED BY GEORGIA'S SOLONS

peachment, and Judge Speer will be given an opportunity to appear in person or to be represented by counsel to defend himself against the accusations of the department of justice.

ACCUSED OF USING COCAINE.

Besides charges relating to alleged unlawful proceedings in his court it is understood that one of the accusations against Speer is that he is addicted to the habitual use of cocaine, as a result of which he is rendered temporarily unfit to discharge the duties of the office. In connection with this charge, it is recalled by congressmen that Judge Pickering, of the United States court, was impeached for habitual drunkenness.

One of the most serious charges, however, is understood to be an allegation that Judge Speer has played favorites in the selection of receivers, masters and referees in cases in his court. It is alleged that J. N. Talley, of Macon, formerly Speer's court reporter and law partner of Speer's son-in-law, A. H. Hayward, has in times past been appointed receiver for many concerns.

It is said that the charges state that Speer has borrowed money from Talley and not always been prompt in discharging the financial obligations thus incurred.

SAID HE HELPED SON-IN-LAW.

Still another allegation is that Judge Speer has presided in cases in which A. H. Hayward, Jr., his son-in-law, was an attorney on a contingent fee, with the knowledge that his decision would affect the fee of the son-in-law. The Beach Manufacturing company case, it is understood, is cited as one of the specifications under this charge. After Judge Speer, in 1912, refused to adjudge the company an involuntary bankrupt on the petition of Dave Park er and W. W. Bennett, of Baxley, and certain Savannah attorneys, it is charged less than a year later he threw the firm into bankruptcy and appointed a receiver on petitions which were filed by the firm of Isaac & Hayward, his forward being his son-in-law. When this case was filed in court, Wilson, Bennett & Lambdin, attorneys of Waycross, set up that Judge Speer was disqualified to sit in judgment, because his son-in-law appeared as counsel. Speer thereupon handed his docket of the case and transferred it to Judge Newman, of the northern district of the state ,sending the papers in person by an agent of the court.

The examiner's report contains the charge that Speer was absent from his district when he should have been attending to his duties in south Georgia and that contrary to law he considered cases when outside of this district and jurisdiction. This charge is understood to refer to Speer's frequent visits to Savannah and Tybee and to Mount Airy, where he goes for relief from hay fever. Attorneys and clients in south Georgia district, it is said, have been caused unnecessary annoyance and inconvenience and much additional expense by Speer's failure to remain in his district. The elimination of the admiralty practice at Savannah is understood to be cited as a specification under this charge of absenteeism.

UNLAWFUL PUNISHMENTS.

Other charges against Speer are that he has been guilty of imposing unlawful punishments in contempt cases and has ignored the mandates of the United States court of appeals and the United States supreme court.

Chairman Clayton, of the judiciary committee, told The Journal correspondent today that the special report in the Speer case covers probably 100 typewritten pages and includes affidavits, etc. He said that the committee made slow progress yesterday in its consideration of the case, because the record was read slowly and the members allowed to indulge in comment as the reading progressed. Only twenty pages or so were covered.

The committee will resume its work on Monday, unless, as is probable, it is decided to defer further consideration pending action by the Georgia congressmen.

Judge Speer has had a notable career. He was born at Culloden, Monroe county, September 3, 1848, and is, therefore, sixty-five years of age. He was graduated from the University of Georgia in 1869. He served throughout the Civil war in the Confederate army, in the Fifth Kentucky regiment. Admitted to the bar in 1869 at Athens, he became solicitor general of the northern circuit in 1873 and served for three years. He was defeated for the Forty-fifth congress, but was elected as an Independent Democrat in the Forty-sixth and Forty-seventh congresses in 1870-1882. He was appointed United States attorney for North Carolina in 1883 and served in that position until 1885, when he became judge for south Georgia. He was nominated by President Arthur, and was confirmed by unanimous vote, that of the then Senator Joseph E. Brown, who was the only Democrat to so vote.

CALIFORNIA LAND LAW WEALTHY JAP TO TEST

First Test of New Alien Legislation to Be Made by Rich Property Holder

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 21.—The first test of the constitutionality of the California alien law will be begun here within the next few days by H. Tanigachi, a wealthy Japanese, according to his attorney, F. A. Chamberlin.

Tanigachi desires to transfer 200 acres of land to fellow countrymen for agricultural purposes. Because the law provides that aliens not eligible to naturalization cannot become possessors of real property within the state, Tanigachi directed Attorney Chamberlin to secure an interpretation from the United States courts as to its constitutionality.

CLAYTON CREDENTIALS PRESENTED TO SENATE

Bankhead Believes Alabamian Will Be Given Seat in Upper House

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Aug. 21.—Henry D. Clayton's credentials were presented to the United States senate on Thursday morning, according to a telegram received by Governor O'Neal from Senator John H. Bankhead.

The message said: "Clayton credentials presented today. Growing belief he will be seated. Many of best lawyers in senate now hold you have the power to appoint; also that you cannot now call an election. See no reason why you should not attend governor's convention."

Governor O'Neal declared that the message meant there would be no hitch in his departure Friday night for the governor's conference unless something unexpected should develop.

REPORTS OF SHOWERS IN TEXAS CHECKED ADVANCE

Market in New York Closed Unchanged to 3 Points Up From Previous Close

(By Associated Press.)

NEW YORK, Aug. 21.—Cotton was somewhat irregular at the start, prices being 4 points lower to 5 points higher. Weak Liverpool cables were offset by a bullish private report from conditions in Texas and Oklahoma. The outlook was for continued dry weather. Business was active and there was heavy realizing here and in England, but offerings were well taken and prices made new high ground, active months selling about 5 points net higher. The advance was checked by continued profit-taking and reactions of several points occurred during the early trading.

The market seemed more or less unsettled late in the morning with prices selling off several points from the best but firming up again on detailed weather reports, with active months unchanged to 2 points higher at middays.

After selling about 13 to 18 points net higher all month cotton turned easier under heavy realizing inspired by reports of an easier southern spot basis and predictions of rain over the cotton belt within the next two or three days. Selling was heavy on the reaction and with covering prices back to within 3 or 4 points of yesterday's finals.

NEW ORLEANS COTTON

(By Associated Press.)

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 22.—Cotton futures opened steady at an advance of 1 to 5 points on continued drouth in the western cotton belt. Cables were much lower than due and a bullish failure was reported in the English market. Both features were ignored. After the call the market closed 3 to 7 points up. Buying was good for both accounts. The posting of the weather forecast predicting only scattered and a large part of the western belt encouraged the belief that moisture was in sight. Some increased their offerings of short cotton and holders of long cotton sold out on a large scale with the result that the first hour of the second half hour of business prices were 8 to 9 points under yesterday's close.

Toward the middle of the morning fresh reports of crop deterioration in the west were claims that in some counties of Texas and Oklahoma irreparable crop damage had been done eliminating buying. Sharp covering and a renewal of long orders for long account came in from interior points. The inquiry was met by very limited offerings and the decline of the early hours was quickly recovered and a net advance again established. Late in the morning the trading months were 9 to 10 points over yesterday's last quotations. Bulls again started profit taking and at noon prices were at a net rise of 3 to 4 points.

COTTON MARKET OPINIONS

Logan & Bryan: In the absence of sufficient precipitation in Texas and Oklahoma, there is little doubt but that a higher level of prices will ensue.

Morris H. Rotchschild & Co.: Sentiment has changed in the last few days and confidence is lacking on the short side.

Miller & Co.: We advise against following this advance.

A. Norden & Co.: We think purchases in quiet markets will show profitable.

NEW YORK COTTON LETTER

NEW YORK, Aug. 21.—There was considerable covering on and after the opening and some buying by the bull leaders, and apparently there was very little cotton for sale. The market ruled quiet after that time until the detailed weather report which was posted at noon for yesterday in the whole belt, showing very high temperatures in Texas and Oklahoma, with no rain. This started the buying and some 10 to 14 points rally followed quickly. It is believed that the short interest has been reduced to a great extent on this advance. Some of the private weather reports are calling for more general rains in the next forty-eight hours which is bringing out some selling and profit taking. Should rains come in Texas, it is likely that it will get a setback. The bull leaders are confident of the ultimate big crop movement accounts for December in the very near future.—Anderson.

HAYWARD & CLARK COTTON LETTER

NEW ORLEANS, La., Aug. 21.—The weather map shows very favorable and widespread drought with cloudy weather and scattered showers over the central and eastern states from the latest reports, expressing the opinion that by the dry weather, were beginning to arrive. It is hardly safe to say that the crop and trade prospects are much brighter for precipitation and cooler weather in Oklahoma and central Texas. Cloudy, unsettled weather and scattered showers in the center of the belt.

Liverpool came in disappointing with futures 3c one time 6 lower than due spot prices 11 up, sales only 5,000 bales. The failure of W. H. Thompson and company was reported. Our market advanced a little at the opening but soon dropped 12 points when official forecasts promised showers in the central and eastern states and increasing cloudiness in Oklahoma and Arkansas. Trade was small around 11.55 for October and the market is expected to be bullish on account of the dry appearance of new cotton.

INTERESTING NEWS AND GOSSIP OF THE MARKETS

Weather Reports, Crop Advices, Expert Opinions and Newspaper Comment

COTTON GOSSIP

The Times-Democrat says: Many reports of cotton crop deterioration came in from the west yesterday, and the bull party developed more than usual activity. These reports were based on many a day. The Oklahoma crop is undoubtedly suffering severely. Regarding the Texas crop, there is a world of diverse opinion. Day after day the official forecast calls for fair weather and the official crop reports are fair, slightly scattered showers. Meanwhile private correspondents, day after day, report beneficial showers of a more or less general character, which the government fails to confirm. Thus the basis of the bull case for trading on Texas is so badly mixed in the minds of the public as to color every condition reported in both directions. Yesterday one reliable correspondent wired, Texas has not suffered, and is now too late for rains to help much over a large area in Texas." Other correspondents, with a similar confidence in their crop information, asserted that most sections had received beneficial showers, and that the overirrigated plants had lost the excess only and had deteriorated to a normal condition. The belief in the Texas crop promises to be as large as that of last year, but the constant reference to drouth damage in the face of beneficial showers has awakened some fear as to the size of the outturn, which, for the moment, at least, has overshadowed the scarcity of forward demand. The fact also remains that Texas has not yet been killed, and the unfavorable reports coming from some of the foreign spinning centers. Texas needs a solid week of beneficial rains, and then were readily absorbed, in spite of the reports from Galveston to the effect that ocean freight room is being relet. This reletting of freight is said at the moment to be explained as due to heavy engagements some time ago, and to the small number of mules now showing up. Spot cotton was quiet.

The map shows cloudy in the central and eastern belt and in the southern half and scattered cloudy in the northern half and Oklahoma. No rain shown by map in the west, but private reports beneficial showers have scattered showers in the central and eastern states. Indications are generally favorable. Forecast is Oklahoma, north Texas, and Arkansas; unsettled in the rest of the belt.—Hoffer.

Cotton—Bears are parties partly caused to clear; light rains in Jacksonville, Trupp, Palestine, and Houston; Galveston, Halleyville, Waco, Brenham, Doubleville threatening; balance clear."

Forecast—Tonight and Friday: Rain and lightening cloudiness; showers in the southeast portion tonight or Friday; light to moderate temperature; fresh to gentle winds on the coast.

Arkansas and Oklahoma: Tonight and Friday Increasing cloudiness.

West Texas: Tonight and Friday generally fair.

Georgia and South Carolina: Fair except on the coast tonight and Friday.

Alabama: Local showers tonight and Friday.

Kentucky: Unsettled; showers tonight; cooler Friday.

Tennessee, Florida and Mississippi: Local showers tonight or Friday.

North Carolina: Fair tonight and Friday.

11 a. m. bids in New York were as follows: January, 11.46c; March, 11.62c; August, 11.76c; October, 11.57c; December, 11.52c.

Rains fell over the central, north and west Texas and Oklahoma by Mr. Cordill. Reports irreparable damage done.

Wells Fargo's—Some scattered rains reported from Dallas over portions of Texas and Oklahoma; local showers in the central belt; report from Cordill on central and northwest Texas and Oklahoma, which brought out rains; temperatures caused a heavy short covering. Wiggin, Riordan, Mitchell and Dick Bros. cancelled some of their bearish orders.

The market declined on the government forecast for local showers and clearer skies, but the showing good prospects for rains and cooler in Oklahoma also the forecast of the government for showers over the central and eastern states.—Hoffer.

The following letter is from San Antonio: "Scattered rains in this section have been of absolutely no benefit to the crop. What is needed is to lower the grade and delay picking. There is little chance of cotton taking on new growth here now. Local conditions are very poor. Crop would be found waiting for any such development, and the rains have done much more damage than is generally believed, and I don't think it is possible for southwest Texas to make as much as last year, even with an admitted increase of about 10 per cent, and believe the yield will be 10 to 15 per cent less than last season. If the bears could make delivery on account of the heavy rains here in Texas the past month, we would be assured of a season for the next ten years to come."

STOCK GOSSIP

Dow Jones' summary: The Sun quotes Minister of Interior Urrutia, radical, as saying, "The longer remain the international complication as at all strained." The two chancelleries are working together in harmony. Situation improves steadily. Bank rate of England unchanged. New York Air Brake company declares regular quarterly dividend. Bankers meet in Chicago tomorrow to discuss the currency question. Chairman Simmons believes senate will pass tariff measure next week, and expects schedule largely disposed of before end of month. Senate meets at 11 a. m. today, house meets Friday. American stock in London closed 1¼ to 1¾ higher. Steel interests and industrials advanced .37; twenty active rails advanced .25.

The Mexican situation seems to be the principal market factor at present. This af.fair will probably be settled peaceably it might be prudent to reduce commitments on any rally but there will probably be a chance to buy stocks at about these prices when the quarrel is settled.—Potter.

GRAIN GOSSIP

Chicago Inter Ocean says: Most wheat traders say that there is no sign of any material short interest which is likely to wake up any time soon. Constant closing in and buy a lot of short shorts would not find it easy to cover. The majority of local traders in the corn market is heavily disposed to the bull side. The market is in strong hands and responds quickly to bull news.

Bartlett, Frazier & Co. say: Wheat—Some further rains are reported this morning in the spring wheat country. We look for a steady market here today and continue to feel very friendly to the long side.

Corn—There has been practically no precipitation over the belt since yesterday and temperatures are higher. We still lean strongly toward the long side.

Oats—New buying is of moderate proportions, but there are great many cuts held by strong people and we think such transactions will ultimately prove very profitable.

Provisions—There is a good deal of outside buying in January and May positions and we are inclined to favor purchases on all setbacks.

Saving and Investing

GENTLEMAN ADVENTURER IN FINANCE

BY JOHN M OSKISON

A fat man sat in a chair in a dim corner of his office in the Wall street district, and, with a long, contented sigh, slap of his open hand on the table beside him and only an occasional slow wave of his strongly pivoted head revealed his play that he was not dead or in a gold mine in which he had lately become interested.

He was supposed to be a broker—and he won't turn away the visitors who want to invest money in standard stocks and bonds. He hands them over to other brokers who actually do business on the exchange.

But it had occurred to him (so he told me) that it would be worth while to get some one in his office who could follow the investment market and advise his clientele of real bargains. What did I think of the idea?

I said it's a fine idea; and then he went to outline his plan for building up, through a corps of intelligent, well-informed weekly letters, a feeling of confidence in him and his office. Of course, he didn't expect that sort of business to come to him; but later on, when the properties in which he was especially interested were whipped into shape to be put on the market, he would find a public waiting to accept his advice to come in and buy.

What did I think of that idea?

I didn't reply directly to the question. Instead, I rose and went to a map which hung on the wall and asked the fat man to point out to me exactly about that gold mining property—marked very prettily in green and red. He got the point, and launched into a long defense of the financial adventurer who takes a chance with his own money and who takes the money of others on the understanding that it is to go into speculative enterprises.

You have probably heard the argu-

WEATHER CONDITIONS.

An extensive area of high atmospheric pressure now overlies the Atlantic coast, with over 30.4 inches at Boston. High pressure covers the central eastern portion of the United States, accompanied by generally cloudy weather with moderately low temperatures. No rains have fallen generally, however, except along the immediate south Atlantic coast from Jacksonville to Miami, where .01 to .04 inch of rain fell within the last hour.

Another area of equal area of high atmospheric pressure occupies the extreme northwest, also accompanied by cool weather, but with little or no rain.

A slight disturbance is central in the upper Mississippi valley, with another to the north of South Carolina and Minnesota.

Temperatures ranged generally on the Rocky Mountain slope, Oklahoma reporting 98 degrees, Kansas City 96 degrees, North Platte 96 degrees, etc.

Conditions are slightly in favor of local rains with cooler winds in Atlanta and vicinity tonight or Friday.

NEW YORK STOCK MARKET STEADY; SLIGHTLY LOWER

Union Pacific, Copper, Steel, Southern Pacific, Smelters and Can Are Off

(By Associated Press.)

NEW YORK, Aug. 21.—The tendency of the leading speculative stocks at the opening today was downward, although extreme losses in most of issues gave the market an irregular appearance. Union Pacific, Smelting and Amalgamated, the heaviest losers, lost a point each. National Biscuit rose a point and General Electric nearly as much. Southern Pacific again exhibited heaviness, selling off to 90¾.

Closing sales of short contracts yesterday and the late advance sparently weakened the market's technical position and in face of the unfavorable features which the situation presented today traders were not inclined to support prices. Renewed selling for abroad, particularly of Southern Pacific, was one of the chief influences in depressing quotations. Announcement of a reduction of 5c a ton in steel billets provoked selling of United States Steel and the London sales of this stock shortly afterward affected the entire list, which continued heavy throughout the forenoon. There was nothing to throw any clear light on the situation there. Southern Pacific fell to 90¾, the lowest since terms for the sale of the Union Pacific stocks were announced.

Bonds steady.

Speculation became dormant when the professional sellers stopped. The list covered close to the early low level.

Further recoveries were made by some of the coalers and western stocks, but the sluggishness of steel and the coppers kept the general market heavy. Some of these stocks afterwards

Both Sides Concluded Their Cases Wednesday Afternoon

Frank the Final Witness Put on Stand By Defense; Denies Improper Conduct

State, in Rebuttal, Puts Up City Fireman W. C. Dobbs, Who Swears That Motorman Matthews, Three Days After the Tragedy, Told Him That Mary Phagan Rode to Town With George Epps and Got Off Car at Marietta and Forsyth Streets

The introduction of evidence in the Frank trial was concluded just before court adjourned Wednesday afternoon—the twenty-fourth day that the trial has been in progress. The state, after putting up many rebuttal witnesses, announced "closed" at 4:45 o'clock, and the defense made the same announcement at 5:15 o'clock, following the examination of several sur-rebuttal witnesses. The defense closed with the defendant on the stand.

Frank declared that Will Turner, the sixteen-year-old boy, who swore he saw the defendant talking with Mary Phagan in the factory last March and that the girl was backing away at the time, had testified falsely. He also branded as absolutely false the testimony of the young women who swore that they had seen Frank going into a dressing room with Miss Rebacca Carson, the pencil factory forelady.

Frank told the jury that Miss Carson was a young woman with an unblemished reputation. As the defendant stepped from the stand and his attorneys announced that the defense had closed, Mrs. Frank, the defendant's young wife, wept softly.

With the exception of Frank's second brief statement the defense introduced but five sur-rebuttal witnesses. J. M. Asher, N. E. Starr, I. Y. Brent and Miss C. S. Haas, all testified that they had overheard George Kendley, the street car man, attacking Frank and expressing the opinion that he was guilty and ought to be hung. Kendley was the witness who swore that he saw Mary Phagan on Forsyth street, at Alabama, at about 12:05 on April 26.

Nathan Sinkovitz, a pawnbroker, swore that M. E. McCoy had pawned his watch with him at intervals during the last two years and that it was in pawn on April 26. McCoy on Tuesday testified that he had seen Mary Phagan on Forsyth street about 12 o'clock, April 26, and that he knew the time because a few minutes prior to that time he had consulted his watch.

Among the rebuttal witnesses called by the state Wednesday afternoon were the following:

W. C. Dobbs, a city fireman, swore that three days after the murder of Mary Phagan, W. M. Matthews, the motorman on the English avenue car line, told him that Mary Phagan rode into the city on April 26 with George Epps, the newsboy, and that both left the car at Forsyth and Marietta streets.

Oxel Tillander and E. K. Graham, who went to the pencil factory on the morning of the 26th, testified they saw a negro sitting at the foot of the staircase and that he directed them to Frank's office. They couldn't identify Conley as that negro, but said he was about the same size.

J. M. Gantt, former timekeeper and shipping clerk at the factory, swore that the factory clocks were inaccurate and varied from three to five minutes every twenty-four hours.

J. C. Coleman, Mary Phagan's step-father, said the pay envelope introduced by the defense, and said to have been found on the first floor near the stairs, was not the same one shown him by the Pinkerton detectives.

W. W. Rogers testified that the trap door in the rear of the factory was fastened the day after the murder and the stairs were covered with dust and cobwebs.

Ivy Jones, a negro driver, swore he saw Conley at a saloon between 1 and 2 o'clock of April 26.

W. M. Matthews, the motorman of the street car on which Mary Phagan rode to town, was recalled to the stand by the state.

W. C. Dobbs was in court for the purpose of identification.

"Did you ever see this man?" the solicitor asked, pointing to Dobbs. "You saw him about three days after the murder, didn't you?"

"Yes, sir. I did."

Dobbs then was excused from the court, and the examination of Matthews continued.

"Did you have a talk with that man, W. C. Dobbs?" asked the solicitor.

"I don't remember it."

"Didn't you tell him you saw Mary Phagan and George Epps come to town together Saturday, April 26?"

"I never told anybody that."

"Who are some of your neighbors? Do you see any of them in court?"

"No."

"Stand up. Take a good look around," directed the solicitor.

The witness did so.

"Look over there," said the solicitor, pointing to one end of the court room.

Attorney Arnold objected. "I object to this taunt for neighbors," said he. He was sustained by Judge Roan.

"Didn't you tell after the murder that you owed a debt of gratitude to some one connected with the defense in this case?"

Attorney Rosser: "I object to that question."

"No," replied the witness.

WITNESS ONCE TRIED FOR MURDER.

"How long is it since you have been tried here in this court?"

"About two years."

"Who were your lawyers at that time?"

"Moore & Branch, and Colquit & Conyers."

The solicitor's questions referred to a trial in which Matthews was tried for defendant on a charge of murder the deceased being a young boy who Matthews said had attacked him with other boys one evening at the terminus of his line.

On cross-examination by Mr. Rosser:

"How often have you ever spoken to me in your life?" asked Mr. Rosser.

"Two weeks ago was the first time I ever spoke to you."

"How often hae you ever spoken to Mr. Arnold?"

"I never saw Mr. Arnold till I saw him in court here."

"How often have you ever talked to this man?" pointing to Frank.

"I never spoke to him in my life."

NO PECUNIAL INTEREST IN CASE.

"Have you any personal interest in this case?"

"No."

"The offense you were tried for was that a man assaulted you on your car and you had to kill him, wasn't it?"

"Yes, sir."

"They let you out on a $500 bond, didn't they?"

"No, sir, on a $2,500 bond."

"You were acquitted, weren't you?"

"Yes, sir."

"You worked for the company before, and you still are at work for the company, aren't you?"

"Yes, sir."

"The next witness was W. C. Dobbs. He is a member of the city fire department.

He testified that he knows Motorman Matthews, and that about three days after the murder he got on Matthews' car and rode out toward English avenue. He testified that he asked Matthews what he thought about the murder, and that Matthews said in his opinion Frank "was the man who done it."

"Wait a minute," interrupted the solicitor. "We only want you to testify about what Matthews said to you in regard to Mary Phagan being on his car."

MARY PHAGAN RODE WITH EPPS.

Continuing, Dobbs testified that Matthews told him then that Mary Phagan and George Epps came to town on his car and got off at the corner of Forsyth and Marietta streets.

Attorney Rosser asked the witness two questions:

"Are you related to Sergeant Dobbs, of the police department?"

"Yes, sir, he's my father."

"He's one of the men who's aiding and testifying in this case, isn't he?"

"Yes, sir."

W. W. Rogers was recalled to the stand, directly in the line of the early witnesses introduced by the state.

TRAP DOOR FASTENED.

Rogers testified that on Sunday morning, when he went to the National Pencil factory, he made an effort to come up from the cellar to the first floor by way of the staircase in the rear of the building. He testified that the staircase was covered with dust and cobwebs which appeared not to have been swept in a long time, and that the trap door at the top of the stairway was fastened down so that he could not raise it from below. He testified that about a foot and a half from the bottom of the stairs in the basement, there was a pile of shavings.

Rogers was excused, and Sergeant Dobbs was called to the stand. The sergeant corroborated Rogers, the latter having stated that Sergeant Dobbs was with him in the basement.

Neither was cross-examined.

SAW NEGRO AT FACTORY.

The next witness was Oxel Tillander, one of the men who went to Frank's office Saturday morning, April 26, in regard to the two boys who had an altercation in the factory the previous day and were sent to police station; the man who went with him being E. K. Graham.

Mr. Tillander testified that on the first floor of the factory, just inside the front door he and Mr. Graham met a negro. He testified that he asked the negro where he could find the office of the pencil factory, and that the negro told him to go upstairs and turn back to the right.

COULDN'T IDENTIFY CONLEY.

He testified that he had seen James Conley this morning, but could not be positive whether Conley was the same negro he saw in the factory, although he said that Conley is about the same size of that negro. He said that he saw a stenographer at work in the outer office, and saw Frank at his desk. He and Mr. Graham went up there, he said, to get the pay envelopes of the two boys.

Mr. Graham was called to the stand. He corroborated Mr. Tillander's story about the negro, with the exception that he said according to his recollection the negro they saw in the factory was "brighter in color" than James Conley.

NOT SAME PAY ENVELOPE.

J. W. Coleman, stepfather of Mary Phagan, was called to the stand. Attorney Rosser objected to had the objection offer, but just called the court's attention to the fact that Coleman had been in the court room.

"Do you remember having a conversation with a Pinkerton detective named McWorth?"

"Yes."

"Did he exhibit to you a part of a pay envelope that he claimed to have found in the factory?"

"He didn't find."

"What figures did that have on it?"

"It had the figures 1 and ——."

Then Solicitor Dorsey interrupted. "Is this the envelope?" The solicitor showed to him the envelope identified by McWorth and previously out in evidence.

"That doesn't look like it to me," said Mr. Coleman.

The witness continued that the envelope piece that he saw had a figure 1 and then a figure he couldn't make out, and then the figure 5, on it.

"What did you tell McWorth?" asked the solicitor.

"I told him that it wouldn't suit, because Mary drew $1.20 that day."

This concluded the direct examination, and there was no cross-examination.

Harry Scott, the Pinkerton detective, was called and did not answer.

J. M. Gantt was called to the stand.

"Did you ever see Frank making out the financial sheet?" asked the solicitor.

"Yes."

"How long did it take him?"

"From an hour to an hour and a half after I had furnished to him the data."

FACTORY CLOCKS INACCURATE.

"Are the time clocks they have in the factory—the ones they punch—accurate?"

"No."

Judge Roan replied, "All right," and Scott answered the question.

"I personally informed you about it on July 18," said Scott, "after that I found about it myself. That was in our office when Detective John Black came up to see it."

Attorney Rosser objected to the answer.

Solicitor Dorsey: "I want to show that the head man of the Pinkertons showed him this buggy whip stock, and never showed him the club at all."

Judge Roan, however, sustained the objection this time.

"Did you pick up any cord when you went through the basement of the pencil factory with Frank?" asked the solicitor.

"I think I did."

"Did you or Frank pick it up?"

"I'm not certain, I think I did.

"How did the detectives first get the information that Conley could write?"

"I first found out from McWorth and another of my operatives."

Attorney Rosser objected to the question and answer, but was overruled.

"Tell us what you did after you found out Conley could write?"

Attorney Rosser objected on the ground that the subject had been gone into on direct examination, and was sustained.

In reference to Darley, what passed in the conversation between you, Detective Black, and Frank?"

HAD FACTS OF DARLEY.

"Frank said Darley was the soul of honor. He said that Darley couldn't be bought for a time like that. He told him that we had the facts that Darley had associated with other girls in the factory, that he was a married man, and that it looked mighty bad. I forget whether he said he had heard it or not."

"Was there any such term as 'nothing doing' used in that conversation?"

"No, sir."

L. S. KENDRICK CALLED.

L. S. Kendrick, formerly a night watchman at the National Pencil company, was called. The first question asked by the solicitor was as to whether he, the witness, had ever held any conversation with Holloway in regard to him, Kendrick, swearing that Frank had never called him at night while he was night watchman.

Attorney Rosser objected, and there was a lengthy argument, and finally the solicitor passed over this matter and took up another line of questions, and stated that he would submit his authorities later. If the court ruled with him, he said, he would recall Kendrick to the stand.

Kendrick testified in response to other questions by the solicitor that he was there two years or maybe more. He was asked if he had ever seen any men and women together in the office on Saturday afternoons. He had, not, he replied.

"Did you ever fix a time slip so that it would show a whole night's work?"

"Yes, I fixed one, one night after the murder. I don't remember the day exactly."

Solicitor Dorsey handed to the witness a time slip which he identified as the one that he had fixed.

"How long did it take you to fix that time slip?"

"Two or three minutes."

"Did the time clock ever need setting?"

"Yes, and sometimes it needed setting about every twenty-four hours."

"How much variation would it show usually?"

"Anywhere from three to five minutes."

"If the machinery was going in the factory, could you hear the elevator?"

"I should say you would not be likely to hear it on the top floor unless you were close to it."

"On the night after the murder, did you observe the stairway and the chute leading down into the basement in the rear of the building?"

"Yes, sir, they were both very dusty, and the trap door to the stairway was closed."

HEAD SEEN CONLEY THERE.

"Did you ever see Conley around the first floor of the factory on Saturday afternoons?"

"Yes, sir, when I've been by there to get my money I've seen negroes down there."

"Did you ever see Conley there?"

"Yes, sir."

The witness was cross-examined by Attorney Rosser.

"The negroes were sweeping down there, weren't they?"

The witness did not make his answer very plain, but Attorney Rosser persisted and finally understood that they might have been sweeping.

"Who corrects the clock?"

"Sometimes I did and sometimes Holloway."

"What time did you correct it?"

"Mostly every morning."

"Were you ever on the fourth floor when the machinery was shut down and the elevator was running?"

"No, sir."

"When?"

"I don't remember the date."

VERA EPPS TESTIFIES.

Vera Epps, aged eleven years, was the next witness. Although brought in as a state witness, she practically corroborated the statement by John Minar, a Georgian reporter, relative to his visit to the Epps home the Sunday after the tragedy.

Vera said that she told the reporter that she saw Mary on the Thursday preceding the last time, but said she did not know whether or not her brother George heard her say that. She said that George had nothing to say to the reporter concerning having seen Mary Saturday. In that she corroborated George Epps, her brother.

SAW CONLEY ENTER FACTORY.

C. D. Maynard was the next witness he said he knew C. B. Dalton, and that on the Saturday afternoon in June or July, 1912, he saw Dalton going into the National Pencil factory with a woman. He described the woman as weighing about 125 pounds. He did not remember her well. The hour was between 1:30 and 2 o'clock in the afternoon. The witness described himself as a salesman for the Truitt company.

On cross-examination, Attorney Rosser asked him how he spoke to Dalton when he saw him entering the factory. The witness replied that he did not.

Conductor W. P. Hollis, of the trolley company, was called.

"Do you remember having a conversation with J. D. Reed on April 28 relative to the murder?"

The witness said he did not.

"You were not when you were on the stand before that you did not remember seeing Epps on the car, didn't you?"

"Yes."

J. D. Reed, of Kirkwood, was called in, and Hollis said Reed often had ridden on the car. Reed was not cross-examined and Reed took the stand.

Replying to the solicitor's questions, he said that on Monday after the tragedy coming to town on Hollis' car they got to talking about the murder, and Hollis said it made him feel mighty bad to think he brought the little girl on her last trip. Hollis told him, the witness swore, that Mary was talking to a little negro boy that afternoon and was her sweetheart, George Epps.

The witness was excused without cross-examination, and Detective J. N. Starnes took the stand again.

Detective Starnes testified that he examined the area around the scuttle hole on the first floor of the factory and that he found no blood spots. Other questions which the solicitor asked Frank were objected to because the defense claimed they were merely repetitions.

MINOLA MCKNIGHT'S ARREST.

"Then tell us about Minola McKnight's arrest," said the solicitor.

Starnes, talking slowly without interruption, said: "Campbell and I were at the solicitor's office, where Minola had been brought by a bailiff. We have information that she had valuable evidence which she wouldn't give us, and we placed her under arrest, turning her over to a wagon man. We did not see her until the next day, when we called Messrs. Pickett and Craven down and asked them to interview her. When they were in the room, I asked her whether she would rather talk to them by themselves, and she said yes, and we left the room. We didn't go back until we were called. Then I told her that all we wanted was the truth, and that we did not want her to say anything that was not the truth.

"Craven had started taking her statement in a long hand, but we called in Stenographer February. While she was making her statement, I saw Attorney Gordon and told him that if he wanted to we would be glad for him to come in and hear her make the statement. When he got there, February had part of the statement written out, and we had him read it over for the benefit of Gordon. When it was finished, February took it out and wrote the statement on the typewriter, in the presence of Craven, Pickett, Campbell, Attorney Gordon, Albert McKnight, and myself, the statement was read to Minola and she said it was correct and signed it. I don't remember Attorney Gordon making any demand on us, except for information about her."

DORSEY IN ORDER ARREST.

Solicitor Dorsey: "Did I order or authorize her arrest?"

"You did not," said Mr. Starnes.

"Did I direct you when to turn her loose?"

"No. You said for me to exercise my own discretion."

Attorney Rosser cross-examined the witness.

A STORMY EXAMINATION.

Attorney Rosser went after the witness vigorously, to elicit admissions that Minola McKnight had been coerced into making the affidavit. The cross-examination was rather stormy, and was marked by minor clashes between the attorneys.

"When you arrested Minola McKnight, you did it because she didn't make the kind of statement you wanted, didn't you?" demanded Mr. Rosser. "I want to know what excuse you had for locking her up."

"Well, sir, we were working on this murder case—"

"I don't want to know that," said Mr. Rosser.

Mr. Dorsey: "I submit, your honor, that the witness ought to have time to answer."

"I withdraw that question," said Mr. Rosser. "What authority did you have for locking up Minola McKnight? Do you look to me up whether you have the right to or not?"

"I did it for the best interests of the case and the state," said he.

"You arrested her in Solicitor oDrsey's office, didn't you?"

"I arrested her on the sidewalk in Central avenue after she had walked out of the solicitor's office."

"She was screaming and hollering in Dorsey's presence, was she?"

"No, sir, I don't think she was. We arrested her on the street and then put her in the patrol wagon to send down to the police station. She started in screaming then."

NOT IN DORSEY'S OFFICE.

"Are you sure you didn't arrest her in Dorsey's office? Where did you call the 'Black Maria' from?"

"My recollection is that we called the wagon from Corrian's office."

"Well, that's right across the hall from the solicitor's office, isn't it?"

"Yes, sir."

There followed numerous questions and interruptions and objections and arguments. Sometimes two or three were talking at once. Finally Attorney Rosser asked: "Solicitor Dorsey didn't disapprove of arrested this woman, did he? He didn't say: 'Mr. Starnes, this is a violation of the law. Don't lock her up.' He didn't say that, did he?"

"I don't think so."

"Well, now if she had been in jail twenty-four hours, you went to her and asked her if she'd rather make a statement to you than to these gentlemen that work at Beck & Gregg's, didn't you?"

"We waited outside till she was ready to make the statement."

"You had no warrant for the arrest of this woman?"

"No."

"You had no charge of a crime against her?"

"No crime. My purpose was to get the truth, whatever it was. I said to her: 'Minola, if it ain't the truth, we don't want you to tell it. We only want to get the truth of this thing.'"

"Didn't you say you telephoned Dorsey about turning her loose after she made the statement?"

"I don't remember now whether I telephoned him about that or not."

The jury left the court for a brief recess.

Attorney Rosser continued the cross-examination after court reconvened.

"PHONED TO DORSEY.

"Didn't you say you telephoned twice to Dorsey, Starnes?"

"My recollection is that I phoned him that Minola had made a statement, and also told him then that George Gordon, her attorney, was coming up to see him."

"What did he want to see Dorsey for, if the solicitor had nothing to do with holding her? What did you want with his permission if he had nothing to do with the case?"

"He was associated with the state in the Frank murder case. I didn't want to act without his advice."

"What did you say in your second telephone message?"

"As I recollect it, he called me the second time. He told me that if the chief was willing, he didn't see any reason why we shouldn't turn the woman loose."

Starnes then was excused from the stand.

STATE TENDERS DOCUMENTS.

The documentary evidence tendered by the state was as follows: Portions of the testimony of Miss Hattie Hall before the coroner's inquest; affidavit of Wade Campbell; parts of the Minola McKnight affidavit; the slip of paper found in barrel at Newt Lee's house; report from the pencil factory to the liability insurance company, on the injury of J. E. Duffy; affidavit made by Lemmie Quinn to the solicitor; portions of Lemmie Quinn's testimony before the coroner's inquest; record of the proceedings to transfer James Conley from the Fulton county jail to the police station; James Conley's affidavit; photograph of Frank's handwriting identified by his mother; bottle containing cabbage taken from Mary Phagan's stomach; a piece of envelope found by Barrett under machine on the second floor; portion of E. F. Holloway's signed statement to the solicitor; portions of the testimony of Emil Selig before the coroner's inquest; portions of the testimony of Mrs. Emil Selig before the coroner's inquest.

At 4:45 o'clock Solicitor Dorsey announced to the court that the state had closed its case.

FIRST SUR-REBUTTAL WITNESS.

T. Y. Brent, employed by the defense as a subpena server, was called by Mr. Arnold as the first witness in sur-rebuttal. Witness testified that he knew George Kendley, the street car man who on Tuesday testified that he saw Mary at noon on the day of the tragedy. The witness said he had heard Kendley express his feelings in the case while he was riding on a car with him to Fort McPherson. He said that Kendley was very bitter toward Frank, and that he heard Kendley say that he thought Frank like he did about the case of two negroes hanged in Decatur. He said he didn't know whether or not they were guilty, but that Frank ought to be hung for the murder of a street car man.

On cross-examination, the solicitor asked: "Are you the Brent that lives at 4 Williams street?"

"Yes."

"Did you ever work for the Woodward Lumber company?"

"Yes."

"Why did you leave them, and what was the charge against you?"

Mr. Arnold objected. Judge Roan ruled out the question.

"Are you the Brent who went through the factory with Dr. Billy Owen?"

"Yes."

PLAYED CONLEY'S PART.

"What part did you play in the drama?"

That of Jim Conley."

"Come down," said the solicitor.

N. E. Starr, who lives on Washington street, was the next witness. He said he knew Kendley, the street car motorman; that he talked to Kendley on car about the Frank case; that he heard Kendley say Frank was as guilty as a snake, and that if the court did not convict him he would be one of the seven men to get him. The witness was not cross-examined.

Miss C. S. Haas was the next witness. She testified that two weeks ago, while going out Washington street, the trolley car man, Kendley, was a passenger; that she heard him talking about the Frank case. She said he declared that circumstantial evidence was the best evidence to convict on; that 90 per cent of the good people of the community, including himself, thought Frank was guilty. The witness said that a young man sitting near her disputed the point, and that Kendleyturned to him and said sneeringly, "You work for a Jew." The state objected to Miss Haas' testimony, but Judge Roan ruled that it was admissible.

M'COY'S WATCH WAS IN PAWN.

Nathan Sinkovitz, a pawnbroker, was called. He testified that he knows M. E. McCoy, who testified Friday that he looked at his watch and shortly after that (at noon on April 26) he saw Mary Phagan on Forsyth street.

"Has this man pawned his watch with you?" asked Mr. Arnold.

"Yes, sir."

"When did he pawn it?"

"On January 11, 1913."

"Where was it on the 26th of April?"

"I had it."

"When did he pay up the loan on the watch? I want to ask you if it was during the trial."

On August 16 he handed me a $10 bill."

"Did he have any watch of his own at that time?"

"No, he had to look at a clock in my place to see the watch."

"Did you ever know him to have another watch?"

"No, sir."

"And he's been pawning this one with you for two years, hasn't he?"

"Yes, sir."

On cross-examination, Solicitor Dorsey asked: "What kind of a looking man is Mr. McCoy?"

"He's a tall man."

"You don't claim to state, do you, that that was the only watch he had? That was just the only one he ever pawned to you?"

"That's the only one I ever saw."

The witness was excused. Solicitor Dorsey moved that all of the witness' evidence be stricken from the record, on the ground that McCoy, when he went on the stand, did not testify that he looked at his own watch. Attorney Rosser said: "He said 'my watch.'"

Judge Roan: "We'll let it go in for what it's worth, Mr. Dorsey."

HEARD KENDLEY ATTACK FRANK.

J. M. Asher was called. He testified that he was on a Washington street car about two weeks ago between 10 minutes to 1 and 5 minutes to 1, and that Kendley attacked Frank. The witness said that he himself was talking to a man sitting beside him on the seat, and that the street car man hidding on the other side of the line, was sitting across the aisle one seat back; that several people in the car were discussing without invitation and said violently attacked Frank. The witness testified that he was so incensed that he took the number of the street car man and recorded him.

"Did the company discharge Kenerly?" he asked.

"I don't know."

"You just went by the number, did you?" asked the solicitor.

Attorney Arnold said: "If there's any doubt about it, call him in."

Kendley then was called in and identified by the witness.

Asher was excused.

He was the last sworn witness of the trial.

When he stepped from the stand, Attorney Arnold announced to the court and said: "Your honor, two or three new matters have come out in the rebuttal that the defendant ought to make a statement about. We ask your permission to let him take the stand again."

Solicitor Dorsey said: "The defendant has no right to make more than one statement."

FRANK BACK ON STAND.

Judge Roan: "I'm going to allow it. Let him confine himself exclusively to the rebuttal, though."

Leo M. Frank, the accused, took the witness chair and again not under oath said:

"In reply to the statement of the Turner boy, I want to say that what he said is absolutely false. Regarding the statement that I talked to Mary Phagan and called her 'Mary,' witnesses are mistaken. It is not impossible that I did call her Mary, but never saw her by name. The statement made by two girls that they saw me going into a room with Miss Rebecca Carson is absolutely false. She is a woman of unblemished reputation."

Frank stepped from the stand.

Attorney Arnold announced to the court that the defense had two more girl witnesses from the fourth floor of the pencil factory who would testify that they knew of no misconduct on the part of Frank and that his character was good.

Solicitor Dorsey said that this would not be surrebuttal evidence, and he thought it was inadmissible.

Attorney Arnold waived the point.

DEFENSE CLOSED AT 5:15.

Attorney Arnold announced then, at 5:15 o'clock, that the defense had closed.

After some discussion informally between the lawyers and the court, it was agreed that the arguments will begin Thursday morning.

Judge Roan announced that he would suspend the rule limiting the attorneys to four hours.

Court then adjourned at 5:20 until 9 o'clock Thursday.

Attorney predicted that the probable length of time of each argument would be four hours. That would make a total of eight hours or one day's session.

Following the arguments there will be the charge of Judge Roan to the jury.

As the defense closed, Mrs. Lucile Frank began weeping softly.

The Evening Story

Her Nosey Neighbor

(Copyright, 1913, by W. Werner.)

"I like my new surroundings. How do you like yours?" asked Dolf with an air of knowing just what the answer would be. Cora had been delighted from the first with her new home. Thus far she had not mentioned a single drawback. And Dolf had ceased to expect that she ever would.

They sat at opposite sides of the dainty breakfast table, Cora with her elbows on the table and her eyes looking straight into Dolf's. She started to speak; then she glanced toward the window. With an angry "Huh!" she jumped up and jerked the shade down to the bottom. "There!" she exclaimed. "That woman was learning the pattern of the table cloth by heart, and it is time I stopped her."

"What woman? Dolf was astonished.

"That old Mrs. Crane next door. Crane's a good name for her, too. Her neck is so long that she can poke her nose into everybody's business. Especially mine. There's not a thing that escapes her, and she stands at her side door every time we eat and looks right in on the table. That was what she was doing when I pulled down the shade. I guess she took the hint, for I heard the screen door slam when she went in. I haven't said a thing to you before," Cora went on, vehemently. "But I began to notice her inquisitiveness from the very first. She never came in through the front door. 'I ain't no front door caller,' she said. 'Back door's good enough for me. I hope you don't object to shawl catters.' What could I say? I feel like shooing her out with the broom, but I don't. I hate nosey folks, "and she's too much so for any comfort.

Dolf leaned back in his chair and laughed. "Poor girl, I had no idea Mrs. Crane was that sort. If she annoys you too much, I suppose I'll have to treat her as I do the pigeons when they clip the runners off the peas—scare her away with a shotgun."

"Oh, Dolf," Cora's brows rippled in a frown. "It's no funny matter. How would you like somebody always dropping into your office when you were fretted with business? Or watching your every movement through the keyhole? I guess you'd do something desperate."

"I guess I would, too. I'd take off my best shoe to fire at 'em. And I wouldn't blame you if you did the same. Go ahead, Cora. Chase her out. You won't hurt my feelings any."

He got up, stretched, patted the cat and, coming around to his wife's chair, kissed her.

"I'm going to act on your word," Cora said, smiling, "and chase Mrs. Crane out if she comes nosing round here today."

Cora lingered at the door to watch him down the street. He was still her fond lover, though her husband for ten years. At the corner he waved his hand in a final farewell and Cora went back to the breakfast room.

After all, there was no occasion to chase out Mrs. Crane that day, for she did not again make herself obvious. So Cora had nothing to tell Dolf either at dinner or supper time. But the next morning as she was making a pie in the kitchen a voice suddenly assailed her through the screen window. "Oh, dear me, sis-a-dy!" she exclaimed.

A brown face peered at her through the screen. Up came a bunch of luminutive pansies held in a scrawny dark hand and were wagged at her enticingly. "Want 'em?" asked Mrs. Crane. "They're Johnny-jump-ups. I see you aint got any on your place."

Cora crimped pie crust as for dear life. "No, we haven't any. What a hot morning it is? You see, I'm very busy."

Her tone failed to communicate the shiver she intended and Mrs. Crane brightened. "Making strawberry pie, eh? It's dreadful nice, but expensive. I guess I'll just come round to the door with these posies."

She came. Cora kept her back turned, uncompromisingly. "My, your kitchen's awfully pretty. You can wash off them walls, can't you?" The old voice grew almost tremendous. "I suppose I'm bothering you. Ain't I?"

Cora did not answer. She had finished her pie and she carried it into the oven. Then with a bang she shut the door. When she turned Mrs. Crane was gone, but a bunch of reproachful pansies lay on a chair. Cora snatched them up and dashed them into the fire. Then she sat down by the table, laid her arms among all her floury things and cried. "It was mean," she thought, "but I had to do it. I couldn't be so pestered. And I don't care! She should have known better."

"Well," Dolf asked at dinner time, "have you routed her yet?"

"Yes, but I feel awfully mean about it, after all. I was mad enough to do anything then, but now I feel somenow like I'd thrown a stone at a hungry, prowling dog."

It really seemed as if the old woman had at last acknowledged the barrier Cora had raised thus crudely, for she did not again intrude openly. She kept away from the door, she did not approach the fence; she made no further excuses to be friendly. But often Cora felt that she was peering out of her windows—peering wistfully and wonderingly and perhaps timidly, yet with her old curiosity undiminished. Cora kept all the curtains on that side of the house drawn. She was determined that the break should be permanent, however mean she felt about it. She had done what she had and now she would, outwardly at least, stand by her own act.

But it worried her considerably. Indeed, it was seldom out of her mind. One night she could not sleep for thinking about it. Next morning she was in such a feverish, unhappy state that she could not rise. Dolf telephoned for the doctor. Cora had summer grip, he said. She was something more than uncomfortably ill.

Dolf stayer at home with her that morning. But in the afternoon he was called to the office. Cora could see that he was worrying about certain affairs he had on hand which needed all his attention. She felt he must go. It was a close, stiff afternoon. Cora tossed upon her bed. She ached and she felt hot and flighty. After a while she dozed for a little time, troublously. When she awoke the first thing she saw was Mrs. Crane in the next room doing something with a lemon. She gave a cry and Mrs. Crane responded instantly. Even yet Cora could not realize that the old woman was flesh and blood and not a figment of her fevered imagination.

"I've thought about you night and day and here you are," she moaned, hoarsely.

"Yes." The homely voice was convincingly real. "I see the doctor come here this morning and I noticed your man didn't go to work till since dinner. I reckoned you was sick. So I came over to see if I couldn't do something. Here's some cold lemonade. You look as if you might be thirsty."

She held a glass to Cora's lips and Cora drank eagerly. As she fell back on the pillow she lifted rumble eyes to the old brown face. "Thank you," she whispered "that was so good, and so are you. You don't bear a grudge, do you, Mrs. Crane?"

Mrs. Crane laughed, creakingly. "Well, not unless there's occasion. Ain't been lately, to my mind. I know my shortcomings, and I ain't surprised any when folks don't put up with 'em. I'm curious at times, but not because I'm mean. I'm just lonesome. Lonesome folks are apt to be nosey. Don't you want me to brush out your hair? It'll make your head feel better."

The grip hung about Cora for a week and Mrs. Crane went right on proving her neighborliness. She saw that Dolf and the cat were fed regularly and that Cora was comfortable. And she seemed very, very happy about doing it all.

"Mrs. Crane seems to have won out with you," Dolf said one day. "Pretty good old party after all, eh, Cora?"

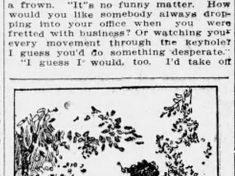
"She's an angel," Cora declared.

"By the way," Dolf pondered, "where were all your front door callers the past week? I haven't seen hide or hair of any neighbor except Mrs. Crane."

"They never came," Cora confessed. "I guess they don't know yet I've been sick. Mrs. Crane was the only one who seemed to find out or care."

"God bless our nosey neighbor," cried Dolf.

"Yes, God bless her," Cora echoed tenderly.



He was still her fond lover.

Little Stories for Bedtime

By Thornton W. Burgess

(Copyright, 1913, by J. G. Lloyd.)

As sure as day turns into night
And night must turn to day,
For every naughty thing you do
You'll surely have to pay.

Chatterer the Red Squirrel ought to have known this. Probably right down deep in his heart he did know it, only he wouldn't admit it, even to himself. He had stolen the eggs of Drummer the Woodpecker, and had told Drummer that Sammy Jay was the thief. One wrong story had led to another, and these wrong stories had got Sammy Jay into no end of trouble. And all the time Chatterer had chuckled wickedly to himself, and had thought himself very smart, so that he never would be found out.

But Sammy Jay is quite as smart as Chatterer, and with the help of Mistah Mocker the Mockingbird he had found out who was to blame for all the trouble they had got into. Now they had planned to get even on Chatterer. Sammy had come to visit Reddy Fox, who is always ready to listen to any plans for mischief and do his share if he is sure that there is no danger in it for him.

"How does it happen," asked Sammy Jay, "that you have never caught that mischief maker, Chatterer the Red Squirrel?"

"Pooh! I never have really tried," replied Reddy, which wasn't thetruth at all, for he had tried very often. "I have plenty to eat without going to the trouble of trying to catch Chatterer, but if I really wanted to I could do it easy enough."

Sammy Jay turned his head to hide a smile, for many times he had heard Chatterer calling Reddy names for trying to catch him. "Oh," said Sammy, "I had an idea that Chatterer was too smart for you, but I see I was mistaken. I was just going to suggest that if you was to hide tomorrow morning behind the old stone wall near Johnny Chuck's home in the far corner of the old orchard you would have a splendid chance to catch Chatterer.

"I happen to know that he will try to steal an egg from Drummer the Woodpecker, and, of course, if you just happen to be at the foot of the tree when he comes down, why, he will just walk right into your mouth. But, of course, if you can catch him so easily this doesn't interest you. I merely thought I might be doing you a good turn."

Reddy Fox pretended to yawn. "Thanks, just the same, Sammy," said he. "Chatterer isn't worth the bother of catching, but I'm just as much obliged to you for thinking of me."

"That's all right," replied Sammy. "I'm sorry not to have been of service to you. I always like to go a neighbor a good turn, and perhaps I'll have better luck next time."

With that off he flew to hunt up Mistah Mocker. "He pretended that he didn't care anything about Chatterer and could a good turn, and prhaps he didn't care anything about Chatterer and could catch him any time he wanted to, and all the time I could see a hungry look growing in those yellow eyes of his. He'll be there all right tomorrow morning," chuckled Sammy Jay as he told Mistah Mocker about his call on Reddy.

And that is just exactly what Reddy Fox was plannig as he stretched himself out in his favorite resting place. "Of course it wouldn't have done to have let Sammy Jay think I really wanted to catch Chatterer, for like as not he would have gone straight over to warn Chatterer. My, but a breakfast of Red Spirrel would taste good! I'll be hiding behind that old stone wall all bright and early tomorrow morning, and we'll see, Mr. Chatterer, if you'll get away from me this time!" And with that Reddy Fox curled up for a nap and dreamed of catching a dozen Red Squirrels.

Bit Hard for Birmingham Club to Win Over the Cracker Crew

TWO GAMES THURSDAY; DECIDE SECOND PLACE

Price and Thompson Will Most Likely Be Worked in Opening Double Bill—Montgomery Leads Atlanta by Just One Game—Four Games to Be Played

With only a one-game hold on second place, Johnny Dobbs' Billikens come here to dispute the right of the Crackers to rise in the scale. Dobbs' men have had a rest lately, and are fresh, while the Crackers are on another winning streak and are flushed with the triumph. Consequently, it should be some scrap, those four games.

The series opens with a double bill this afternoon, and runs for four games. The first game starts promptly at 2:15.

The past series disposed of the Barons in the fight for second place, and it is hoped that this series will do likewise for the Billies as far as second place is concerned. Should the Crackers take three out of four, then they will have passed the Montgovery bunch.

The Brown brothers, Elmer and Curly, will most probably work for Montgomery, with price and Thompson hurling for the locals.

Outlaws Work For Good Game

INDIANAPOLIS, Aug. 21.—Federal league magnates at a secret session held here last night entered into an agreement which insures a substantial basis for the league next year, it became known today. The agreement was in the form of two bonds of $25,000 each which all club owners are to sign before the final meeting of the organization to be held September 20.

The first of these bonds is to guarantee the players' salaries in 1914 and other incidental playing expenses. The second bond is to insure a properly equipped park free of indebtedness. It was also decided to establish new parks in Chicago, Cleveland, St. Louis and Indianapolis.

All the league owners expressed a belief that the organization would include eight clubs next year and with that end in view, Lloyd Hickert, Secretary of the league, and William T. McCullough, Pittsburg, were named to investigate conditions at Baltimore and Buffalo. They will also go to New York to see David Fultz, president of the Players' union, in regard to playing contracts.

The locals expect to annex at least three out of these four games though just returning from the last road trip and a disastrous one. Batteries: Birmingham, Prough and Mayer; Walker and Yantz, for New Orleans in the first game; Gregory and Mayer, for Birmingham, and Wilson and Yantz, for New Orleans in the second game. Weather pleasant.

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., Aug. 21.—The first game of the last series of Memphis and Chattanooga on the local field will be played today. The weather is warm and still threatening. The batteries: Grimes and Street for Chattanooga, Manager Bernhard will not decide on his battery until the game is called.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Aug. 21.—Mobile and Nashville play a three-game series here today, this visit to Nashville being the last for the league leaders this season. Mobile's battery selection is Cavet and Schmidt; Nashville, More and Gibson. The morning was cloudy.

Hit in Ninth Beat Barons

Frank Manush Came Through With the Bingle That Copped Battle

It was a grand exhibition the Atlanta-Birmingham ball game—right to the last and all the better because the Cracker clan slipped over the run that decided the contest. There was good pitching, clever fielding, excellent pegging by Catcher Chapman and not a bone.

Atlanta shot home the run that won in the ninth inning. The bags were filled with one gone when Frank Manush was sent in as a pinch hitter and pinch hit he did. It was a single and Welchonce scored from third.

Pitcher Ery, a new recruit picked up by Molesworth from the Georgia-Alabama league, did the flinging for the visitors and well did he do his work until the crowd got after him in the ninth. Then he blew just as do most youngsters when in a strange land and in a bad hole. It was a hit batsman and a walk that killed all chances of a win.

Joe Conzelman looked wild at the start and was in many bad holes, but there were eight ball players back of him and they did their duty and did it nobly. And after the third round there was nothing to it but the Brown college star. He had 'em on his hip.

The decided feature of the game was Harry Chapman's throwing to second base on attempted steals. Six times he shot down the runner with time to spare and not once did a Baron get away with a theft. It just could not be done. Chap put the ball to the bag and Smith and Bisland did the rest in their usual manner.

Tommy Long and Harry Welchonce paved the way for the first Cracker run in the fourth. Tommy led off with a hit and on the hit and run Harry singled sharply to right and by some fast legging Tommy got to third, from where he scored on Smith's long fly to the outfield.

Joe Conzelman retired the Barons in the eighth on ten pitched balls. Clifton batted at three successive balls, not touching a one. Then Ery took a ball and whiffed at the next three. Marcan was retired on a grounder to short with the count one and one.

Harry Welchonce was certainly next to what Ery was serving. He was up four times and four times he hit it safely. Twice fast running aided him, but the other two were the clean drives. Two of the hits figured in the run-getting.

Wallace Smith rapped a line drive to left field in the sixth that looked good for a home run. Luckily McBride was playing deep. But at that it almost took him off his feet.

The Barons got a dozen runners to the first base. One scored and three were left stranded. After the fourth inning not over three batters faced the youngster in any one round. Just once after the third round did the Barons get a hit.

Harry Holland was the only Atlanta player to walk. Twice he worked Ery for a pass and once he sacrificed, being credited with but one at bat and that time he was thrown out by Elam.

Tinker Is an Admirer Of Harry Chapman's Work

Red Boss Did Not Relish Idea of Losing Catcher to the Crackers

One of the main causes for the big squabble between Manager Tinker, of the Cincinnati Reds and August Herrmann, owner of the club, was the placing of Catcher Harry Chapman with the Atlanta club early in the season. Herrmann placed this promising young receiver here thinking the sale outright, while Manager Joe Tinker was of the opinion that it should have been an optional sale which would have given the Cincinnati club the right to recall the player later in the year.

Manager Tinker contends that you must keep strings on all promising youngsters if you intend to build up a ball club and he is just about right. Chapman made a big hit with the Red mogul and he wished to place him out with strings attached but Herrman could not see it that way and as the result Chapman is now the property of the Crackers and it will take a good stiff price for the Reds to land him.

Chapman is one of the Crackers who has improved wonderfully during the past two months. He has taken on new life and his nervy catching has been responsible for many of the Cracker victories. He has a lot of pep, knows the game, sides the batters and knows just how to handle a pitcher. And above all he can peg to the bags and is hitting hard, timely and often.

There is yet a chance that Chap will be lost to the locals with the closing of this season. You know there is the draft and Tinker may slip in a slip for him, thus landing for the player at a low price. Then, too, there is the straight purchase but will take more than $1,500 to land in this manner. Manager Smith thinks entirely too much of Chap to let him go for a song.

BAD SPILL AT 'DROME

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Aug. 21.—Five motorcycle racers crashed together here last night during a five-mile race at the motordrome and as a result Ed Bowen, of New York City, is in the hospital with a broken shoulder and serious internal injuries, and four other riders are suffering from severe cuts, bruises and minor internal injuries.

The most seriously injured, also in hospitals, are:

James Cox, Dallas, Tex.; Clem Stokes, Los Angeles; Bert Bruggerman, Denver, and Lawrence Fleckenstein, also of Denver.

The racers were bunched and going at a terrific speed. Stokes was leading and forced the other riders near the top of the track. Bowen went up over the safety rail and his machine slid down the track, spilling the other four.

Five thousand persons in the crowd jumped from their seats when Bowen went over the safety rail. A panic ensued for a time, but no one was injured.

Big Rally at Playgrounds

About 7,000 children will take part in the interstate program which has been arranged for the closing exercises of the city playgrounds. This rally day program will be held at Grant park. Special cars will carry the children to and from the exercises.

The program includes competitive events, playground games and folk dances, and children participating will be presented with souvenirs donated by the candy and cracker firms of the city, who are appreciative of the great amount of good the playgrounds are doing.

At six playgrounds this season the attendance has been close to 30,000, and much good has been accomplished in the physical education of these children.

On Thursday afternoon the colored children of the Storr's school playground will have their rally, and on Friday morning the Gray school children will have their rally.

The general public is cordially invited to Grant park to attend the rally day exercises. The Fifth Regiment band will furnish music for the occasion.

Elmer Wins Shoot

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Aug. 21.—Dr. R. P. Elmer, of Wayne, Pa., with 150 hits and a score of 1,600 points, won the men's double American round championship medal at the annual tournament of the National Archery association of the United States today. G. P. Bryant, of Melrose, national champion, was third, making 149 hits, scoring 305 points.

FIVE GAMES DROPPED TO BIRMINGHAM TEAM

CHANGES FOR JUST A DAY

Three in a row from Birmingham, while Montgomery and Mobile were idle brought Atlanta considerably nearer the top.

The Athletics put one over on Detroit, while the Naps had an off-day. The Naps are not pushing the Mackmen as they were at the first of the week, when they had just taken a series from the leaders.

COBB VS. JACKSON

Cobb gained considerably on Jackson Wednesday when he got two out of four, while Jackson was idle on account of the fact that Cleveland and Washington had an off day.

Here are the averages up to date:

Player.	G.	AB.	R.	H.	Pct.
Jackson	112	396	85	155	.391
Cobb	86	291	49	113	.388

Present For The Manager

Wednesday was Billy Smith day, his birthday, but which one it was we are unable to prognosticate. Billy is as bashful as a maiden of twenty-five about telling how many years it has been since he broke into the life league.

Atlanta's popular manager, however, got some send off into his blanket year on Wednesday. Some 4,000 fans visited the park to witness the ceremonies and the presentation of the birthday gift. The band also added hilarity to the assemblage.

Just as the game started the Loyal Rooters presented Manager Smith with a gold horse shoe. Loyal Rooter Smith did the presenting, rounding it off with a nice little speech.

But this wasn't all, not by a long shot. They also presented Billy with a package of tobacco, "enough to last through a double-header," which is indeed some bunch.

Atlanta Made Barons Look Cheap All the Way, Winning 15 Battles and Getting Clean Sweep in Two of Six Series, Barons Won One Series of Games

If the Atlanta club could play the Birmingham Barons all season there would be nothing to the Southern league race but a pennant for Billy Smith and the booby prize for the Molesworth clan. In the twenty games the two clubs have played this season the Crackers have won fifteen and the other five resulted in wins for Birmingham.

The Alabama delegation has always played jam up ball against the Cracker crew and yet for Molesworth to do seems an impossibility. All of the games have been close, but the Crackers managed to hit when they counted the most and the result was victory after victory.

The Birmingham bunch started off like they intended swamping the Crackers, taking the opening game in Birmingham, but then turning around and beginning to lose everything else in sight. In Barnsville ten games were played between the two teams and the Barons won only two. One each was won in the first two series, the Crackers getting away with a clean sweep in the last setto.

Here at Ponce de Leon the Barons made a better showing than at home, in fact the Molesworth delegation actually won one series, taking two out of three games the second time the clubs clashed. Ten games were contested at Ponce de Leon and the home bunch won seven.

The failure of the Birmingham club to play winning ball against the Atlanta team has probably cost Molesworth one or two pegs in the pennant ladder. Had the Barons been able to win fifteen of the twenty games against the Crackers the club would right now be tied with Mobile for first place, the latter's streak to Atlanta being the sole cause for the low standing of the Alabama aggregation at present. However, Birmingham yet has a chance for a good windup.

Jonesboro Wins

JONESBORO, Ga., Aug. 21.—The Jonesboro and Fayetville baseball teams came together in a hot contest today. As usual, Jonesboro came out victor, 11-7.

For Jonesboro the feature of the game was the hitting of Bialock, Mathis also of Atlanta, while for Fayetteville Martin starred.

CAN'T LEARN TENNIS GAME BY PLAYING ONE SEASON

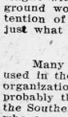
NEWPORT, R. I., Aug. 21.—That a complete mastery of the game of tennis cannot be achieved in one season is demonstrated on the Casino courts here when Maurice E. McLoughlin and T. C. Bundy, national doubles champions, successfully defended their title against J. R. Strachan and C. R. Griffin, the challengers. The championship pair defeated their youthful rivals in straight sets at 6-4, 7-5, 6-1 and even these figures do not express the margin of victory always in the hands of the older and more experienced players.

The challengers by virtue of their spectacular march through the preliminary rounds of the doubles earlier in the season were expected by many spectators to give McLoughlin and Bundy a sensational battle. When they actually crossed racquets with the champions, however, it was seen that their play still lacked the finesse of the doubles master. They did a strong, steady game, but a game that owing to its immaturity was not capable of conquering the veteran pair across the net.

The challengers played their best game, even when they realized defeat must be theirs, but meantime the champions were piling up the points. An adequate idea of the difference in the play of the two pairs may be gained from the fact that McLoughlin and Bundy scored 36 earned points to 21 for their younger rivals. On nets, double faults and outs by their opponents, the champions gained 71 points while giving away 57.

McLoughlin and Bundy appeared to be slow in getting started and early in the match the younger pair frequently aimed Bundy's short lobs. They played to the latter on every opportunity, but Bundy's game was easier to handle than McLoughlin's. The latter's serve troubled the youngsters.

Strachan and Griffin made their stand in the second set but while they carried it to deuce, they were unable to break through. Bundy here played his steadier game while McLoughlin repeated his speedy smashes. Both Strachan and Griffin netted and aced repeatedly. At the finish the champions' [illegible] pions swung into their old time pace and simply smothered the challengers.



BUNTS AND BINGLES

BY JULIAN MURPHEY

The talk of the formation of another baseball league in the southern territory is not meeting with as much comment as one would naturally expect. And all from the fact that fandom has not yet taken the matter seriously, believing it is all talk rather than a real move to organize a circuit.

Apparently one of the greatest mistakes made by the fans who started out to incorporate the new circuit was that they entered the scheme blindly. They did not investigate as to find out that to form a baseball league within a certain radius of another league without permission from the league holding first title to the ground is to constitute an outlaw organization. It was not the intention of the organizers to form an outlaw circuit and yet that is just what has been started.

MANY WILL BACK OUT.

Many of the organizers of the new league, or rather the names used in the numerous applications for charters, went into the plan of organization without any real idea as to what it meant. They probably thought the league would be placed on the same footing as the Southern and upon finding out the case is different there are those who are putting out some of the Nashville directors being the latest to announce that he will quit in case the Southern league does not give its full consent to the placing of Dixie league clubs in its territory.

Though the announcement that the Dixie circuit was being formed was made only two or three days ago the Southern league officials have already come out strongly against any such move. President W. M. Kavanaugh has announced in no weak terms that he is strong against any such move, making it a sure bet that the Dixie will have to be an outlaw organization.

ATLANTA CLUB OPPOSED.

Here in Atlanta there isn't a chance for the Southern league team to give its permission for the entrance of another club. Continuous baseball will not go here and President Frank Callaway is strongly opposed to the entrance of another team. In fact he will not permit any other organized league to enter Atlanta.

Personally it does not look as if an outlaw league in this section can prosper. Southern league baseball is mighty fast and interesting and yet with this advantage many of the clubs fail to make any money and at that have baseball only half the season. With an inferior class of ball, which is sure to be given by the outlaws, there isn't a chance for it to be a paying proposition. Outlaw baseball has never succeeded anywhere and this case will hardly be an exception.

In the first place the outlaw leagues have no place from which to draw material. They have to contest themselves with players who have served their time in all organized leagues and you know when a ball player isn't good enough for some one of the leagues in organized ball he is getting mighty bad and can't compete with the class of players who do duty in the Southern. In fact the plans for the Dixie league look so bad just at present that it appears doubtful whether it will ever stage a game.

SONG OF THE CITIES.
Sodom, Babylon, Gomorrah,
Nineveh and Tyre—
Sorrowful your finish was,
Terrible and dire;
But if you should like to see
The final word in woe,
From your ashes take a peep
At Cincinnati, O.

There was written, Babylon,
On your walls afire;
Sadder still your closing out,
Nineveh and Tyre;
But if you should care to see
Fate's most vicious blow,
From your ashes take a look
At Cincinnati, O.

The Giants have established their third consecutive reign of National league domains. But protecting their ramparts against the assaults of Baker and Collins or Jackson and Lajoie may involve added details and call for another yarn.

THE PHILLY AMBUSCADE.

The Phillies, shooting at the Giants on beyond them, failed to protect their rear defenses. And before they knew what had happened a third entry was in their startled midst, hacking and hewing their gory beans off.

By the time they had turned to reprise the Cubs, the Giants had skipped on beyond their vision. All of which goes to show that before winning a pennant a ball club must be in position to wheel and fire in several given directions. For even the lowly tail-ender has been known to rise up and assegai the leader before said leader knew that a battle was on.

THE MANAGERIAL TEST.

Joe Tinker and Frank Chance are last with Reds and Yankees, yet Frank Chance won four pennants with another club. Where would Tinker have finished leading the old Cubs, or the Athletics?

Johnny Evers has been rated a fizzle as a leader, yet he is out beyond Fred Clarke, rated as one of the greatest of the game, with a ball club picked to win a pennant.

What's the answer?

ANOTHER ONE

Also, Mike Mitchell, a frost with the Cubs, is a wonder with the Pirates. Leach, a frost with the Pirates, is a star with the Cubs, leading his league in runs. Fromme, winning one out of four with the Reds, has won eight out of ten with the Giants. McLean, a cast-off from the Reds and Cardinals, helped McGraw brace the Giants and break up a slump. McQuillen, booted from the Phillies, is the leading Pirate twirler above Camnitz, Hendrix and Adams.

What's the answer once more?

One suggestion might be environment. There is as much psychology to the game as there is physical and mental. The average athlete is fairly well plugged with temperament, and when this temperament springs a puncture, nothing but a shift will repair the leak.

In addition to those cases mentioned we have an idea that Mathewson, Wagner, Johnson, Cobb and a few others would still be fairly good ball players if set down in the South Sea islands. They, too, have temperament, but not enough to warp their natural stuff.

"All Ping Bodie can do," advances one exchange, "is to hit the ball." Which is that much more than several others can do who are only neck and neck with Ping beyond reach of the bludgeon. "Only hit the ball" covers a multitude of discrepancies.

Wagner, six days in the east, picked up fourteen hits for twenty-four bases, advancing from .290 to .310. He is the same bloke who featured the fanatical war cry to Fred Clarke in Pittsburg: "Hey, why don't you can that big Dutch boob and get some one who can hit the ball?" Which is another answer as to why Pittsburg is no better than fourth.

Recovering From Hazards GOLF Severe Test for Golfers

If all golf consisted of hitting the ball from teed-up tees, from velvety fair greens, the game would not be half so fascinating as it is. Bunkers, traps, and rough along the sides and at odd spots to penalize defective shots from to and smooth fair green are there to add interest to the round.

The player who keeps his ball on the fair green and out of traps has best chances for low scoring, but every player from time to time visits the trouble just to prove that he is human. The best players can recover from occasional difficulties as a rule with very little loss in strokes.

The average player looks upon bunkers and traps as unnecessary impediments, and blames them for his high scoring. One would naturally think that by reason of much experience he would become proficient in getting out of them, but this does not follow as a rule.

Where the expert may be satisfied to get safely out on the course with the hope that a saved putt may equalize the temporary disadvantage, the duffer generally essays to go for the shot with the longest range club he dare to use. The better the lie the more apt it is to lead him to destruction.

Walter Travis, who can generally be counted on to get out of any bunker or trap in a single stroke, is credited with devoting hours at a time to patient practice in scooping out balls placed in impossible lies of odd spots. Probably few players get in difficulties as seldom as he does, and yet there are few players so well equipped to recover with trifling loss.

A point of value in playing out of loose sand or rough grass was imparted to me several years ago by a leading professional. He advised reducing the amount of leverage by dropping the hands down to the lower end of the leather grip or even below it. Then, by making the shot more of a tearing muscular effort, the club will cut its way through to the ball when it is lying particularly bad.

In playing from rough grass the ordinary stroke loses much of its power by reason of the club head being deflected from its course in getting to the ball, and because very often the grass winds around the shaft and makes it extremely difficult to get to the ball at all.

The short grip on the club propelled by the muscles of the arms and shoulders will more often tear it out than the more sweeping stroke that is effective from ideal lies through the fair green.

Chance Strengthens

NEW YORK, Aug. 21.—The New York American league club purchased William P. Holden, center fielder of the New London club of the Eastern association. Holden is said to be one of the fastest men in the association and his batting average for the season is .349. He will report to Manager Chance at the end of the Eastern association season.

SCHWARTZ TO MANAGE CLUB FROM BENCH NEXT SEASON

It'll be Bench Manager Schwartz next season.

Yielding at last to the heavy hand of time which is no respecter of persons, Bill Schwartz has come to the just conclusion that his playing days are over. His legs, which have given him more or less trouble for several years, are fast going back on him and he can no longer circle the bases or field his position with the speed that is considered necessary to make a winner in class A baseball. Therefore, before leaving on the present road trip, he imparted the information that in 1914 he would direct the destinies of his team from the bench and his name will not appear in the line-up unless in the case of dire emergency or as a pinch batsman, his batting orb being in nowise as weak as his legs.

For a while this year when the team was going bad and the knockers were riding him every day, Bill entertained serious intentions of giving up the ship after this season. But upon second thought he decided never to quit "under fire," and so next season we will find him again assuming all responsibility for the standing of the club and pursuing the "golden rule" policy as of old with his men. Bill hasn't signed his contract as yet, but has reached an understanding with President Hirsig and will probably attach his name to the papers when he returns from the road.—Nashville Tennessean.

AT THE WHIRLWIND FINISH BOSTON RED SOX ARE BEST

Boston fans probably have a perfect right to complain of the showing of their Red Sox in the pennant race this season, but they have no reason to hint that the world's champions owe their present position in the championship standing to lack of recuperative powers. The Speed Boys have proved to be the best ralliers in the American league this season, having won seven games in the ninth inning and only having let three contests escape from them in the final spasm. The Naps and the Senators have also captured seven battles in the last regularly scheduled round, but the Clevelanders have met with defeats in seven times in the final chapter and the Washingtons have been bested five times in the wind-up period. The records of the other American league teams in games decided in the ninth inning is as follows: Detroit, won 5, lost 6; St. Louis, won 5, lost 6; Chicago, won 4, lost 4; New York, won 3 lost 4; Philadelphia, won 2, lost 5.

Of the 35 of the 40 American league games decided in the ninth this season, the winning run was put on the records either on a hit or an out; in three contests errors turned the tide; in one a steal of the plate settled things, and in another the pitcher forced the deciding count over by issuing a pass. Only one American leaguer has succeeded in driving home the winning marker in three contests. He is Tris Speaker, of Boston, who won the Chalmers car offered to the most valuable player in the younger organization last season. The trophy winner has caused defeats to be marked up against Chief Bender, Willie Mitchell and Earl Hamilton this season by striking telling blows in the ninth chapter when the count was knotted.

Players who have won two games for their teams by producing timely hits in the last inning this year are Duffy Lewis, of Boston; Ivan Olson, of Cleveland; Maurice Rath, of Chicago, and Pete Compton, of St. Louis. The latter was acting in a pinch-hitting capacity on each occasion he made himself popular with his boss, George Stovall. Other sub-swatters who have won games in the ninth this year are Carisch, of Cleveland; Brief, of St. Louis, and Williams, of Washington.

Big Aviation Week

PUT-IN-BAY, Ohio, Aug. 21.—With the arrival here today of the various entrants, everything is ready for aviation week of the Perry centennial regatta which will be started next Monday. The week will be devoted to hydro-aeroplanes and flying boats. Among the contestants will be Beckwith Havens, Tony Jannus, Walter E. Johnson, Frank Burnside and Hugh Robinson.

Attempts will be made to break all existing records for hydro-aeroplanes and flying boats.

White Sox Trade

CHICAGO, Aug. 21.—Pitcher Lange and Outfielder Mattick, of the local American league club, today were traded to the Kansas City club of the American association for Shortstop Breton. The trade became effective at once.

WILL SUGGEST RULES FOR OLYMPIC MEET

American Representatives Try to Get German Athletes to Enter Games at the Panama Exposition

BERLIN, Aug. 21.—Athletic experts from all parts of the world are assembled here for the opening of the International Amateur Federation. The formal business to be undertaken is the drafting of rules for international competitions, but the delegates are chiefly interested in the Olympic games to be held here in 1916. Though, strictly speaking, they have no right to legislate for these games, they hope to induce the Olympic committee at Paris in 1914 to adopt the federation's recommendations, on the ground that it is the international authority on track and field sports.

There will be a meeting of the executive committee followed by a visit of delegates to inspect the stadium for the Olympic games, which was dedicated by Emperor William last June. The conference proper will open Thursday.

The American delegates are James E. Sullivan, secretary of the Amateur Athletic association; Gustave T. Kirby, Colonel Robert M. Thompson and Joseph B. McCabe. The standardized program for future Olympic games prepared by Mr. Sullivan has many supporters among the foreigners. The Germans wish to simplify the program by substituting a 7,500 meter run, the so-called German mile, for the present 5,000 and 8,000 meters runs. They also desire to eliminate the walking events. The Americans approve these amendments.

Mr. Sullivan and other American delegates are endeavoring to induce a team of German athletes to compete at the Panama-Pacific exposition in San Francisco in 1915, but it is believed they will have a hard task, as the Germans have ample difficulties before them in financing their 1916 Olympiad.

Browns Buy Lavan

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 21.—John Lavan, who has played at shortstop for the local American league club, was sold to the Philadelphia Americans for the waiver price, $2,500. Lavan's fielding average in 45 games was .995 and his batting .145.

Bobby Wallace, the veteran shortstop of the St. Louis Browns, who is out of the game with a broken hand as a result of being hit by Pitcher Bush, of the Athletics, says: "I have been pretty well hunged up in my nineteen years in the major leagues. Otto Hess, now pitching for Boston Nationals, broke my toe in 1902, 'Chick' Fraser almost knocked my head off in 1897, and I have had other minor accidents, but on the whole feel very well."

Dixie League Faces Barons

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Aug. 21.—The Birmingham Dixie baseball club, of Birmingham, has filed articled of incorporation with the secretary of state. Its authorized capital is $20,000, with $8,000 subscribed. The purposes of the club are to lease or purchase ground for playing baseball and other games, to employ baseball players and other employes, and to operate a baseball club. The incorporators are W. J. Francis, Charles J. Hager, B. A. Murrelle, H. N. Pharr and F. C. Shepard, Jr.

It is understood that this will be one of the clubs in the new Dixie league that will embrace six or eight southern cities.

No Permission For New Club

President Callaway when asked his attitude towards the proposed Dixie league, whose circuit is to include Atlanta, stated that he would not give his approval to another league organized with Atlanta as one club.

This will, of necessity, force the new Dixie league into outlawry as the rule of the national commission states that, for a club to be admitted into organized ball it must have the approval of and club whichis already in the field in the same town.

The officers of the league, however, state that they have ample finances to run the league, and will run it, although they would prefer co-operation with the Southern league.

This will probably force them into coalition with the Federal league of the north, which is running in competition with some of the big league clubs.

Pressmen Win Series

The Pressmen met and defeated the strong soldier team a three-game series, taking three in a row. The first game was won by a score of 7 to 6 and the second game 10 to 3. The last game went eleven innings; it was a slugging fest, the Pressmen winning by a score of 15 to 12. The Pressmen have won twelve out of the last fifteen games played and challenge any team in or out of the city. The Pressmen would like to arrange a game for Saturday with some fast team. Any teams desiring a game, write W. Dockendorf, 195 1-2 Marietta street. Bell phone, main 2967. Can only answer phone at 12 noon and 5 p. m.

Grading Land For Auto Track

With Placing of Spur Track Material Will Be Rushed to Grounds

The first real work at the handsome new automobile track to be built on Peachtree road was started Thursday morning when Manager Frank Weldon took a large force of workmen to the ground and began leveling off the field. On Wednesday the street car company began the placing of a spur track to the scene of the track and within another week or so there will be carpenters at work placing the boards.

The building of a mile automobile track is no easy task and the local promoters have decided to hire sufficient help to rush the work to completion and be ready for a big meet some time in October. The order for the boards and nails have already been placed and Jack Prince has the special carpenters here ready to jump right into the work just as soon as the plot of land is properly cleared.

Fortunately for the promoters the land secured for the track is unusually level and there will be but very little grading to be done. This will cut down the time it will take to build the structure. And with the spur track in place early the material for the track can be taken out easily and fast.

Cross vs. Dundee

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Aug. 21.—Leach Cross and Johnny Dundee were matched to box twenty rounds the afternoon of September 1 at the Vernon arena. This ended the anxiety of fight fans over the cancelling of the Cross-Rivers match, owing to the indisposition of the little Mexican, who is suffering from neuralgia. The winner of the Labor day bout will be given another match September 9.

Boston Wins Game

BOSTON, Ga., Aug. 21.—Boston defeated Monticello, Fla., in a very exciting game today by a score of 7 to 6. Kid Blanton opposed Dan Malloy in the pitcher's box and outpitched the famous Monticello twirler, striking out eleven batters. Pittman and Grantham both starred at the bat for Boston, each getting a home run. Batteries: For Boston, Blanton and Massey; for Monticello, Malloy and Griffin.

JOURNAL WANT AD Horoscope

AUGUST 22.

All persons born from August 22 to September 23 are born under the sign Virgo. The sign of Virgo represents the hidden fires of the earth and persons born on any date between August 22 and September 23 are remarkable for their orderly and methodical habits.

They are, however, rather difficult people to live with, as they think their way about everything is the best and only way.

However, they are generous and loyal and love to arrange the affairs of their best friends.

They do not like to apply themselves persistently to any line of work, but if they have a profession which suits they will be very successful.

Wood workers, metal workers, press operators and machinists will do well to use The Journal Want Ads during the coming week.

Agents are also under favorable planetary signs and will find The Journal Want Ads helpful.

Some Want Ads are inserted free in The Journal. For charge ads, ask that they be sent for, or telephone th.m to Main 2000, or Atlanta 423.

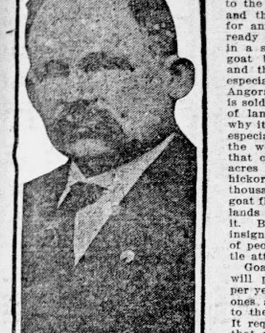
POULTRY, PIGEONS AND LIVE STOCK

Sheep and Goats



THROUGHOUT the south there is very little attention paid to sheep and goats, but there are thousands of acres of land in Georgia, especially in the northern part of the state that is naturally well suited to the raising of goats especially, and this land is absolutely unfit for anything else. There are already quite a few people who are in a small way indulging in the goat business in north Georgia and they find it very profitable, especially where they have used Angoras to various crosses. Kid is sold and often used in the place of lamb and there is no reason why it should not be just as good, especially where it is fat. With the world of bushes and grasses that can be had on thousands of acres of north Georgia oak and hickory land in the mountains thousands of pounds of sheep and goat flesh could be raised on these lands if we would pay attention to it. But, the word "goat" seems insignificant and there is a world of people who care to pay but little attention to them.

Goats are prolific breeders and will produce two to four young per year easily, and if these young ones are fat they will easily sell to the butcher at about $2 each. It requires so little feed for them that you can readily see what a big per cent of profit a flock of goats would make for you.

Sheep at one time were bred very extensively in south Georgia and there is quite a number of flocks that are practically wild at present. Quite a few farmers of north Georgia have taken up the breeding of a better quality of sheep and are feeding and taking care of their herds with more interest than ever. It is well that they are doing so because a lamb this year certainly has brought a fine price.

With the thousands of waste acres in north Georgia and in Florida that an immense amount of food could be produced on it does look like the people of these sections would convert these feeds into food through goats, sheep and even cattle. But, how few people are doing so. Cotton seems to be the only thing that attracts any attention nowadays from the farmer. It may be well and there might be a reason for it, but with the present price of food products of all kinds and people begging for them every day it does look like our people would let the live stock industry even as a side issue and pay more attention to it than we ever have. There are worlds of cheap lands in the mountains and valleys of north Georgia that can be bought for almost a song that would grow the best of sheep and goats, and furnish plenty tender, succulent food for them during the entire year and at the end of the year be worth thousands of dollars when as it is now it is not worth a penny.

The sale of wool, also clippings from Angora goats which sells for mohair, always commands a good price, and it really pays a good per cent of profit if you only realize the sale of wool and hair from sheep and goats to keep them, to say nothing of the offspring and what it would be worth. On account of the dogs a great many people have quit keeping sheep, but in Tennessee, Kentucky and many of the states where people are compelled to convert their food products through live stock into money they do not neglect their sheep and goat industry any more than we do our cotton and corn industry. The truth has been that our farmers have made money too easy on the average Georgia farm out of cotton and have paid but little attention to anything else. This is one reason why packing house products and food products of all kinds are selling at such a tremendous price today compared with what they were a few years ago.

Yours very truly,

You Surely Gain

By reading these Want Ads in The Journal, where every necessity and every requirement by which you may profit is at some time advertised.

QUARTER-ACRE TRACTS TO FIVE-ACRE TRACTS

ALTOLOMA is situated just beyond Decatur, on the Georgia Railroad and the Stone Mountain electric car line, both of which cut through the very heart of ALTOLOMA, a distance of nearly two miles. ALTOLOMA is on the "New South Atlanta Highway." Altoloma has three churches. ALTOLOMA has a handsome Public School Building, which has just been completed at a cost of $8,000. ALTOLOMA is close to Agnes Scott College and the new Lamar College. ALTOLOMA contains more than 350 beautiful lots, ranging in size from QUARTER-ACRE TRACTS to FIVE-ACRE TRACTS. Many of these tracts have running water. ALTOLOMA is unusually high and dry and enjoys perfect drainage throughout.

The Georgia Railway and Power Company is extending the Decatur Car Line to Stone Mountain as fast as money, men and material can accomplish the work. It will be only a few weeks until this company will be operating its cars to ALTOLOMA, and just as soon as the first car makes its initial trip the price of every lot remaining unsold in ALTOLOMA will advance TEN to THIRTY PER CENT. Don't wait until the shrewd speculators have picked all the plums and forced both prices and terms far beyond your reach.

IN THE REAL ESTATE FIELD

Ansley Agency to Offer Sixty South Georgia Farms at Auction on August 28—Floral Company Buys Tract Near Decatur for Greenhouses—Several Transfers Filed—A. B. & A. to Enter Terminal—Real Estate Outlook

On August 28 the Edwin P. Ansley agency will hold a unique auction sale of south Georgia farms near Ashburn, in Turner county.

Sixty farms will be offered ranging from thirty to fifty acres each, and on terms of 10 per cent cash and the balance in one, two, three, four and five years.

These small tracts aggregate 2,500 acres, known as the Dakota farms, which, in its original state was selected as being the best farm offered to work the state convicts on. This plan, however was abandoned and the farm was not sold the state.

The land is four miles north of Ashburn on the G. S. and F. railroad and on the national highway. In fact, each farm offered faces a highway. The farms are in the red pebble district.

Five hundred acres of this land have raised over 500 bales of cotton, and there is fine pasturage. All kinds of crops are grown on the soil.

BUYS GREENHOUSE SITE.

Forrest & Georgia Adair have sold for Edward H. Inman to the Atlanta Floral company, six acres on the Kirk road, near Decatur, for $7,875. The purchasers will erect greenhouses on the land.

NUMBER OF TRANSFERS.

A good volume of transfers went to record on Thursday, including residences at $5,000 and over. There was also quite a number of DeKalb county transfers.

Some new transactions in residence and investment properties were included in the warranty deeds Thursday.

A. B. AND A. PLANS.

The A. B. and A. railroad must be confident of its future, judging by the various development plans it has under way.

It was reported Thursday that it had signed a contract for entrance to the Terminal station, instead of using the old depot, as at present. It has been known for some time that the A. B. & A. would enter the Terminal.

Only recently it leased a tract on Walker street to the syndicate behind the Walker street industrial development, and it will have a part in that development. Just previously to that it secured several parcels on and around Foundry street to the aggregate value of $100,000 or over.

There is a general impression that the road will not be sold, as advertised, but will be reorganized and put on a better basis than ever. Its earnings have been showing a steady increase.

FUTURE DEVELOPMENTS.

Asked where he thought the next activity would strike, an agent remarked Thursday that he figured that activity from now on would center largely on investment property.

This class of property has been neglected to a considerable extent of late years in favor of highly speculative offerings. The investment demand always precedes speculation.

Just now the main business is in homes and vacant lots, with a disposition on the part of the small builders to come back into the home building field.

In general conditions, crops were never better in Georgia, and money continues to show an easier tendency. Washington announces that the crop movement is going on at a good rate. Cotton is being ginned at a lively clip in south Georgia, and is opening in central Georgia and Middle Georgia. Pickling, should be general over the state between September 1 and 15.

BUILDING ACTIVITY.

Building permits for houses costing $2,000 and over of an aggregate value of $40,250 were granted by the building inspector on Thursday.

The value of the residences and the locations were as follows:

Peachtree circle, $7,500. Peachtree place, $4,700; Linwood avenue, two residences, $8,500; Princess avenue, two residences, $4,000; Drewry street, two residences, $5,500; Peachtree place, $4,000; Williams street, $3,000, and Avary drive, $5,250.

It is the building of new houses that shows the growth of the town and swells the aggregate value of permits, and Thursday's showing is an extremely encouraging one.

SENATE RESOLUTION WOULD PLACE TROOPS IN MEXICO AT ONCE

erly to police and protect citizens of the United States and their property, and it is hereby declared that such employment of United States troops for the protection of the lives and property of American citizens is not made with any intent that such policing and protection shall be construed as an act of hostility or unfriendliness toward the Mexican nation."

Senator Penrose said that in a day or two he would "make a few remarks" on the appropriation amendment and his resolution.

"I do not want to stir this matter up unduly," said Penrose. "There is hardly a day that I am not appealed to by people from my state, urging action to furnish protection to Americans in Mexico. It is not a sentiment. It is a condition. Senator Nelson declared it seemed unwise at this juncture to agitate the question.

SHOW CONFIDENCE IN WILSON.

A concerted effort on the part of Republicans and Democrats to support President Wilson in his Mexican policy and to carry to the world the definite idea that the president has the full support of the American people at once became apparent.

Introduction of the resolution was followed by a general demand on the part of the Republicans, second by Chairman Bacon, of the foreign relations committee, for a cessation of all debate, and to support President Wilson.

Emphatic and concerted declarations from senators of both parties of their confidence in the wisdom and good faith of the president were plainly an answer to reports from Mexico, that President Huerta was contending that President Wilson had a divided congress and a divided public opinion behind him.

Senator Lodge, Sutherland, Gallinger, Nelson, Smoot and other Republicans joined in a definite expression that the senate should give the world no occasion to believe that President Wilson did not have the confidence and support of leaders of both parties.

"Nothing that could have occurred," said Senator Bacon, Democrat, "could have given such emphatic heed to the construction some Mexican officials appear to have put upon conditions here, as the patriotic utterances that have been made today on each side of this chamber. I am willing this debate should go to the world as the answer to those suggestions."

HUERTA'S REPLY.

Intimations are contained in provisional President Huerta's reply to the American note presented by John Lind that President Wilson is not backed up by congress or the American people in his stand against recognition of the Huerta government.

Referring to the attacks on the Washington administration by members of congress and pointing to the official recommendations of Ambassador Henry Lane Wilson advising recognition, Huerta declares he is entitled to be recognized. He holds that the Democratic party's power is temporary, and argues that recognition of his government is a partisan question in the United States. He intimates that he reaches his conclusion on private advice from Washington.

To grant arms to the constitutionalists would, in the opinion of many officials, only add to the dangers of anarchy in the republic, equipping bandit bodies with weapons of destruction of which they hitherto have been deprived.

The present administration proposes to defer recognition until a constitutional election shall have been held and President Wilson stands firmly against recognizing the Huerta regime under any circumstances. From these considerations, it is not likely that Mr. Lind's informal parleys with the Huerta officials will continue long.

He will remain in Mexico City indefinitely, however, as adviser to the American embassy, which is without an ambassador. He will continue to make reports on the situation to President Wilson and remain, so far as possible, cordial relations with the de facto government for the purpose of obtaining proper protection to American interests.

Advices that the Huerta government is seriously handicapped by lack of funds, that there is little money with which to pay troops and news of constitutionalist victories strengthen the belief in official circles here that a settlement of the revolution will be accomplished by the constitutionalists within a short period.

LIND AND HUERTA DEADLOCK.

Administration officials, though not entirely without hope of an amicable understanding, were inclined today to believe that the negotiations between John Lind and Provisional President Huerta almost had reached a deadlock. Huerta demands considered as recognition and President Wilson is absolutely against it. Within a day or two, it was said at the White House today, an announcement would be made clarifying the situation.

In all likelihood the American note and the Huerta answer will be published simultaneously.

It is now understood that Lind's supplementary negotiations have availed nothing. Officials today were not sanguine that Huerta would recede and the disposition was to make public the attitude of the United Stat esas expressed in its note.

While Mr. Lind's mission is conceded in official circles to have been a failure so far as its effects on the Mexican government is concerned, administration officials say it accomplished a great deal. Foreign governments, they think, have now been assured of the efforts of the United States to bring about peace and full responsibility for the failure of the effort they place upon the inability of Provisional President Huerta to understand the viewpoint of the Washington government, conceiving that partisan politics is a factor in the situation.

LODGE UPHOLDS WILSON.

Senator Lodge, ranking Republican member of the foreign relations committee, talked briefly with the president today about the situation, declaring afterward he was doing all he could to uphold the hands of the president. He was informed of the progress of Mr. Lind's negotiations but declined to predict what the next step would be.

President Wilson's disposition is said to be to make known to congress exactly what has been attempted through Mr. Lind's mission, proclaim the aims of the administration and let things in Mexico take their course, leaving drastic measures in the hands of only when American lives are in danger.

Suggestions that a military demonstration on the Mexican border and a naval demonstration along the Pacific and Atlantic coasts of Mexico would influence better protection for Americans in case of emergencies, have been made to the administration.

Constitutionalists Reply To Appeal of Peace Forum

EAGLE PASS, Tex., Aug. 21.—Constitutionalist leaders in Piedras Negras today issued a reply to the offer of the international peace forum through its special representative, Henry Allen Tupper, to aid in bringing peace to Mexico.

The constitutionalist reply asks that the United States give them the same privileges in the importation of arms and ammunition that has been accorded to the Huerta government, promising that if this is done they will bring peace in the near future. They pledge to maintain any obligation which they may have may contract, also to protect within the limits of international rights, the lives and property of all foreigners and to indemnify them for any losses due to the direct effects of the war. As soon as "Huerta is vanquished" they promise to hold an election to establish constitutional government.

They appeal "to the high sense of justice of the United States," to grant them the same privileges as are granted their enemies.

American Proposals Rejected by Huerta

First, complete cessation of hostilities; second, that President Huerta resign in favor of a president ad interim; third, the fixing of an early date for the presidential election, and, fourth, that General Huerta should not be a candidate for the presidency.

An additional feature of the American note was the request for a reply to the question as to what, in the opinion of General Huerta, the present conditions were due and what is the remedy.

Frederico Gamboa, Mexican foreign minister, and other officials of the government, continue to reassure the public—utilizing the local press for the purpose—that the negotiations have not been concluded, but on the contrary are progressing cordially and satisfactorily. The foreign minister goes so far as to say that in his opinion a wholly satisfactory arrangement will be reached within a few days.

Certain well informed Mexicans say it would be no surprise to them if the government of Mexico submitted to Mr. Lind some proposition which might serve as a basis upon which to renew negotiations.

Mr. Lind and the Mexican foreign minister had another long conference today, but the nature of the conversation has not been revealed.

FIGHT FOR THAW'S FREEDOM POSTPONED TO NEXT WEDNESDAY

authorities, opinion varied as to what course would be followed.

One version had it that he would be returned to Coaticook where he was arrested on Tuesday and from there deported, if it were proved that he was an undesirable allen, to the nearest border point in vermont or New Hampshire.

Another theory advanced was that council for Thaw would attempt to show that he had a through ticket to Detroit and would demand that he be taken there and released.

A third conjecture was that the whole proceedings would be transferred to Montreal, where the case would be threshed out before a special board of inquiry.

Messers Conger and Hornbeck hoped that some arrangements could be made whereby Thaw would be taken to the New York state line. On this point the immigration officers were non-committal.

Feverish and worried, Thaw dressed before sun-up today and received Mr. and Mrs. Carnegie as his first visitors. Though apparently cheered by their arrival, their presence seemed to make him more closemouthed than ever regarding his escape.

Thaw's fellow prisoner, who describes himself as Mitchell Thompson but who *has been identified by Conger and Horn*beck as Roger Thompson, driver of the black racing car which whisked Thaw away from the asylum, remained silent in his cell today. Charged with violating the Canadian immigration laws in assisting a lunatic across the border, Thompson was unable to furnish the $500 bail required and must stay in his cell until Friday when he will have a hearing.

THAW SAFE FOR AGES.

Owing to errors in the papers committing Thaw to jail he is safe there for an indefinite period as no date for the hearing of his case was mentioned in them. While in jail Thaw is also safe from the impigration department which has no power over him.

By allowing Thaw to remain in custody the defense has offset the immigration authorities who had been waiting with confident expectation for Thaw's release from jail, when they would have pounced upon him and it is firmly believed, ordered his deportation at once.

Thaw, is, of course, fighting against being deported to the New York state line, as such a move would entail his immediate reincarceration in Matteawan.

Little importance is attached by the immigration department to the fact that Thaw has a through ticket to Detroit, which fact, it has been claimed by the defense, would enable him to proceed on his way out of Canada. The fact that Thaw is a lunatic in the eyes of the country from which he came makes his entrance into the dominion illegal and gives the immigration authorities, once they get hold of him, power to detain him or immediately ship him back whence he came.

W. L. Strutleff, K. C., one of Thaw's lawyers, left for Ottawa last night to confer with the department of the interior. His purpose is believed to be to endeavor to secure a promise from the department that if deported Thaw might select his own destination.

If this move should result successfully it was declared here this morning by one of Thaw's counsel that he might go to South America.

The summoning of Mr. Greenshields from Montreal to take precedence over all the Thaw lawyers, serves to confirm the impression that Thaw's relatives, so far as possible, are taking the conduct of the case out of his hands. Mr. Greenshields is described here as one of the ablest lawyers in the dominion, who rarely takes a criminal case. He is being assisted by Mr. Shurtliff, of Coaticook, and Charles D. White and Colonel Harry Fraser, both of Sherbrooke.

The flaw in the proceedings against Thaw as they have been conducted in Canada up to the present time is the commitment on which Thaw was lodged in jail.

In additional of several errors in the description of Thaw's status in Matteawan, it omits specifically to fix a date for the hearing of the case.

Immigration officials yesterday were jubilant over attempts making so free Thaw, as they knew that when released he would walk out of jail into their hands. They were somewhat taken back because he was not to be produced today.

Charles D. White said today:

"We delayed taking advantage of the writ of habeas corpus to get better acquainted with the case. It may be that we will wait a week.

"There is a corporal's guard of us lawyers and we have to move slowly in order to not step on each other's feet."

Thaw's principal worry seems to be how much of the synopsis of Jerome's speech to the jury in 1908, which he handed out to the press with request that it be published, was used by the American and Canadian papers. The synopsis emphasized Jerome's opinion that Thaw was not insane. The prisoner telephoned to a number of papers and requested to be supplied with a copy of what was dispatched them on the speech. All day yesterday telegrams marked collect were arriving from these papers for Thaw. This curiosity cost him over $100.

Thaw Entered Canada From Vermont, Not New Hampshire

CAVENDISH, Vt., Aug. 21.—It appears today that Harry K. Thaw entered Canada from Vermont, and not directly from New Hampshire, as had been supposed. The village of Beecher Falls, where he left the train, is on the Vermont side of the boundary between the states. It is in the town of Canaan, Vt.

This is believed to be the basis for the report that Thaw would probably be turned over to Vermont authorities.

Beecher Falsl is in the extreme northeast of the state, close to the Canadian line. From this village Thaw drove and he probably did not again enter New Hampshire. This point will be definitely determined and the Canadian authorities informed accordingly.

Governor Fletcher, at his home here today, had before him a statement by Attorney General Rufus E. Brown, in which the attorney declared he considered Thaw an undesirable and dangerous person and that he would advise the surrender of the fugitive to the police of New York state.

Canadian Authorities Try Hard to Deport Thaw

ALBANY, N. Y., Aug. 21.—Acting Governor Glynn was advised over the telephone by the immigration authorities at Ottowa this afternoon that they would use every effort in their power in having Harry K. Thaw returned to New York state.

Evelyn Thaw Still Says Harry Wants Her Blood

NEW YORK, Aug. 21.—Evelyn Nesbit Thaw does not want reconciliation with her husband, and doesn't believe reports from Sherbrooke that he wants a reconciliation with her.

"The last reports of Harry are simply frightful," she said today. "They are the worst yet. What shall I do if that man gets back to New York? He wants to get free in order that he may take his vengeance and kill me."
